Tooele County issued 26 single-family building permits in the first two months of 2012 compared to 19 single-family permits issued in January through February last year, according to U.S. Census Bureau data. In Tooele City, nine building permits for single-family homes have been issued so far this year, compared to five issued through the end of April 2011, according to Richard Jorgensen, Tooele City land use technician. And in Grantsville, building permits for single-family homes for the first quarter of 2012 are up by one home over the first quarter of 2011, with 14 permits issued in 2012 compared to 13 in 2011, according to Mike Haycock, Grantsville's building official.

"We have continued to issue permits to developers in Stansbury Park," said Karen Richards, Tooele County building department clerk. "I have also noticed recently an increase in permits in Erda, Lake Point and South Rim."

According to statements made in court Tuesday, the girl reported the abuse to her mother in 1994, and the man subsequently told his LDS bishop what he had done. This resulted in him being excommunicated from the church, but the bishop never reported the crime.

Vernon mayor wants hospital to up ambulance services

by Rachel Madison
STAFF WRITER

The mayor of Vernon wants ambulance services in the town beefed up, but according to Mountain West Medical Center officials who run the service, the town doesn't receive enough calls to justify an increase.

Vernon Mayor Kent Sagers said three people in town were certified as EMTs last year and can operate the town's ambulance, which is housed at the Vernon Fire Station. But because one retired and one's certification expired last September, there is now only one EMT for the entire town.

"We still have our ambulance, but if this person isn't in town, the ambulance doesn't get used," he said. "If she's gone, they have to bring one from Tooele or Stockton out, which takes up to 40 minutes just to get to Vernon."

Sagers stated that a lot of the calls the Vernon ambulance gets called out to aren't in the town proper, and this could cause even longer wait times if the town's EMT isn't available.

"Our ambulance goes up to the Vernon reservoir and out toward Eureka to the county line," he said. "We also go out to the Pony Express Road going east. It just makes it hard on that one person when they are the only one who can respond."

However, Tracy Schaffer, ambulance director for MWMC, said the Vernon Fire Department does have on-call first responders.

"We do offer first responders," she said. "They have a fire department, and Rush Valley and Stockton are closer and they have first responders too. Care can at least be initiated because they are on call and are a lot closer than we are in the city."

Schaffer said first responders often have an EMT certification. Depending on the level of their certification, from basic to intermediate to being a paramedic, that's how much first aid or care they can administer. She said the biggest difference between ambulance service and first responders is that the ambulance provides transport services.

"First responders can initiate treatment with whatever [first aid items] they have on their fire truck," she said.

Sagers said there have been times when people in Vernon have called an ambulance and had to wait for longer than 30 minutes before they received help.

"It can be scary sometimes," he said.

Sagers said the town paid for two residents to become certified as EMTs last year, and he would like the hospital to hire them. The certification cost a little more than $600 for each person. He said although he didn't personally speak with anyone at the hospital before paying for the certification courses, the town's current EMT did, and was under the impression that if two new people got their certifications, they would be hired on.

"I personally didn't talk to them beforehand, but it was the town's understanding that they would be hired on if they got [the certification]," Sagers said.

Schaffer said Vernon simply doesn't get enough calls to justify hiring more EMTs.

"They average maybe one call a month," she said. "It's hard to justify putting someone on an ambulance when they won't be getting the calls needed to make them better EMTs."

Schaffer said EMTs in Vernon are paid for each call they respond to.

"If they get a call they are paid when they get that call," she said. "If they are around they will get the call, and if they're not, then we [Tooele] will respond."

Schaffer said she could not share salary amounts, but about 25 percent of an EMT's salary is the amount it costs the hospital to hire a new EMT. She said their salary is dependent on their skill levels and which position they have.

"We're running them as a third person on the ambulance [during training] when we normally only have two, so that's an extra cost as well," she said.

Vernon Mayor Kent Sagers stands outside the Vernon Fire Station where the town's ambulance is housed Wednesday afternoon. Only one Vernon resident is currently a certified EMT and can operate the ambulance.

Schaffer said the former EMT whose certification has expired has the ability to get recertified. However, it's something he has to do on his own.

"We can assist him, but he needs to have a certain amount of hours [of work] done and take his test," she said. "We can't do it for him. If he does that, then he will be recertified. It expired last September and we are waiting for him to finish [the recertification process] up."

Schaffer said the hospital can't just hire the two people who took the certification course.

"Our process is not like it used to be," Schaffer said. "We can't just hire someone and put them on an ambulance. We have to have a position approved through our corporate policy, and we have to put them through 90 days of training."

Schaffer said the 90-day training period is very important for EMTs in smaller towns like Vernon because there aren't many other resources close by. She said another policy involved in hiring EMTs is a rigorous interview process.

"The mayor told me that a 90-day training shouldn't be necessary, but it's company policy and we can't change that," Schaffer said. "He said his EMTs had full-time jobs or were moms and didn't have time, but every other EMT has to go through the training, so it's not anything different."

Doug Sagers, director of business development at MWMC (Kent's third cousin), said the hospital is willing to work with the town of Vernon on the issue, but the correct processes have to be followed.

"They simply just jumped the gun a bit [with paying for two new people to be certified], but we'd be glad to go out and visit with them," he said. "We have policies we have to follow and we just can't make exceptions."

As Grantsville Police Chief Dan Johnson steps down from the position he's held for the last two decades this Friday, his lieutenant will take his place — for the time being.

Grantsville City Mayor Brent Marshall said Lt. Steve Barrett will be the interim police chief from April 20, when the period for applications for the position ends, until a replacement chief is chosen. Barrett has been with the department since April 1997 and was a patrol sergeant for the state Department of Corrections for eight years before that. He is currently over patrol, and said his main focus as interim chief will be to make the transition to a new chief as smooth as possible for police and the public.

"Chief Johnson did an absolutely fantastic job in laying down the foundation and building this department up," Barrett said. "The main concern right now is there's a lot of uncertainty on what's going on — there always is when there's change. My main goal right now is just to maintain public safety for the city and keep the staff in operational mode."

Barrett said he has applied to be Grantsville's permanent chief.

Johnson, whose retirement follows a suspension of his police certification by the Police Officers Standards and Training (POST) council in March, has been chief of the department since 1992, and began work with the department in 1986. His certification was suspended for 18 months for an October 2010 incident in which Johnson and his son were hunting and shot a deer on land for which they did not have a specialized hunting permit.

Marshall is in the process of compiling a council to aid in hiring — which he said is not typically done for all department-head hirings, but is being done in this case because he feels the position of chief is more public and has more direct interaction with citizens than some other city positions. The hiring council will include two members of the Grantsville City Council, some city employees and a few private citizens. He intends to go through the applications this weekend and meet with the hiring council to discuss finalists next week.

"I can't tell you when a decision will be made other than we will make a decision as soon as we can," he said. "I have no idea who all the applicants are."

The mayor will present the name of a chosen applicant to the city council, which will then confirm or deny that selection.

According to the job announcement for the new chief, applicants should have work experience in law enforcement and office administration, and "have a demonstrated ability to work with the inherent diversity of duties and personnel in a rural setting." Applicants must also have graduated from high school, have current POST certification and 15 years of law enforcement experience, 10 of them in a supervisory position or equivalent in education and experience. The new chief must also be a resident of Grantsville City within six months of accepting the position.

The announcement states salary will range from $60,000 to $80,000 annually, plus benefits. Johnson's current wage is $79,123 annually.

West Wendover man hospitalized after suspected gang-related beat down

by Lisa Christensen
STAFF WRITER

A West Wendover man was hospitalized after being beaten in a fight Monday night.

Officers from the West Wendover Police Department were dispatched to a residential area on a report of a violent fight in progress at about 10 p.m. The victim, 20, was found severely battered, and was taken by medical helicopter to a hospital in Salt Lake City, according to a press release from the West Wendover Police Department.

According to witnesses, the victim was fighting physically with another man, and in the course of that scuffle a third man intervened and began hitting the victim with a long wooden pole. One of the two men suspected of beating the victim, 20-year-old West Wendover resident Salvador Avila, was arrested and booked into the Elko County Jail Tuesday morning for attempted murder and battery with a deadly weapon.

Chief Ron Supp of the West Wendover Police Department said police are still looking for the second suspect, and said neither the victim or Avila has given officers any indication of a motive in the incident.

"Nobody's talking," he said. "We Salvador Avila suspect it's probably gang-related."

Supp said West Wendover generally has little gang activity.

S&W Lounge to close this weekend

by Lisa Christensen
STAFF WRITER

The S&W Lounge will close its doors this weekend after a disagreement between the bar's leasee manager and the property's owner.

The lounge, adjacent to the S&W Trailer Park in Lake Point, will close by Saturday after more than 40 years of operation. Chester Stearns, whose family owns the property, said the closure was prompted by concerns of liability from an insurance company, and the high cost required to quell those concerns.

"They said there are too many repairs needed on the lounge to get it up to code for us to keep it open," Stearns said. "We cannot, as a family, afford to do the repairs, so it's better for us to just close it."

Nina Moore, manager of the bar, said she doesn't agree that it needs excessive repairs.

"The family had a vote, and they just voted me out. They said because the roof leaks. I told them I already bought tar, but now I returned it and got my money back," Moore said. "They just want me out."

Moore did not have a lease on the building nor pay rent, Stearns said, but paid for utilities and the liquor license. Moore's involvement with the lounge came about from an agreement with Valentine Edward Stearns, who died in January 2011. Chester Stearns said the arrangement benefited the park because the use of the building, and utilities paid on it, kept the bathrooms and showers attached to the lounge heated and accessible for people using the overnight parking. Now, he said, that facility will just have to be done away with, at least for the time being.

"We're just going to post that there are no showers available at this time," Stearns said.

Stearns said he did not know just how long the lounge had been in operation, but that it was there under a different name, Finch's, before his father bought the property in the 1970s.

Kelly Johnson, a son-in-law and an executor of the deceased Stearns' will, said the family wishes to thank the patrons of the bar.

"It's a family decision. They decided it was in the best interest of them and the trailer court to close the bar," he said. "The trailer court's going to keep going as it is and probably improve."

Michael Ophar, bartender at the lounge, said he does not understand just why the bar will be closed, but has passed on the word to regular patrons. Likely, though, he said, the closing will not significantly effect the area.

"It doesn't even get that packed," he said. "I wouldn't imagine a whole lot of people are going to miss it."

Tooele County News Briefs

At the Tooele City Council work session on Wednesday, Tooele City Mayor Patrick Dunlavy told the city council that he, along with city staff members, is working on a recommendation regarding the city's sign ordinance. He said he wants to make the ordinance more specific and bring continuity to signs citywide. He will bring the recommendation to the city council in mid May. At that time he will also invite business owners to a meeting to discuss how the changes will affect them before the council comes to a final decision. — Rachel Madison

At the Tooele City Council meeting on Wednesday, an ordinance regarding business license revocation was discussed. The ordinance was originally very general and stated business licenses could be revoked if a business owner violated the law. Now there are specific violations listed that will result in revocation of a business license. These include falsifying information on a business license application, cheating by falsifying product labels or weights and measures, crimes committed by employees or business owners, and sales of illegal substances. The appeal and revocation procedures will not change. The council voted unanimously to adopt the changes to the ordinance. — R.M.

The Tooele County Commission approved a contract with Florida-based Trinity Services to provide meals for the county's senior programs at their April 17 meeting. Trinity Services will provide prepared individual meals for Meals-on-Wheels for $3.38 each. The meals will be provided in sealed containers that can be frozen rewarmed in a microwave oven. The company will also provide bulk food for group meals to be prepared and served at the Senior Centers for $2.89 a meal. Trinity Services currently provides all the meal services for the senior programs in Davis County, according to Josh Maher, Tooele County Senior Services director. "They are a large company and due to the economy of scale they can provide these meals for much less than the county could if they tried to prepare them in-house," said Maher. "We will save $500 week on labor costs alone." — Tim Gillie

Opening day for Little League in Grantsville will be this Saturday. Although games will be played throughout the day, a parade with the players will begin at 5:30 p.m. The parade route will be on Quirk Street from the tennis courts to Cherry Street, and on Cherry Street to the ballpark, necessitating the closure of those streets until about 6 p.m. Hot dogs, cooked by members of the Grantsville City Council, will be free for players and their families, friends and guests starting at 7 p.m. — Lisa Christensen

Home

Industry experts say part of the reason for the increased interest in new homes may be that buyers can now find new homes on the market in the same price range as foreclosures and shorts sales.

Bach Homes, a Draper-based home builder, recently took over the Copper Canyon subdivision on Tooele's west side. Melissa Collings with RE/MAX Complete of Grantsville, which is handling sales for the development, said the model home at Copper Canyon has been very busy.

"We have seen a steady stream of people come through the model home," said Collings. "Bach Homes has 77 lots in the development and I have five customers that are already close to signing contracts."

The 1,200-square-foot new homes in Copper Canyon start in the $140,000 range, which makes them competitive with short sales, said Collings.

Foreclosure activity in Tooele County has slowed in the first quarter of 2012, meaning less homes on the market at discount prices for fast sales.

RealtyTrac, a national firm that tracks the foreclosure market, indicates that in Sept. 2011, 111 homes in Tooele County received a notice of foreclosure activity compared to seven homes in March 2012 that received a foreclosure notice.

Brandon Nay, owner of Pride Builders in Tooele, has also seen increases in new construction this year.

"Our new home construction has doubled this year," said Nay. "I think buyers are out and looking more than last year and finding new homes affordable."

Chris Sloan, broker for Group 1 Tooele Real Estate, has also seen an increase in buyers for new homes.

"I am working with three buyers that are building new homes right now," said Sloan. "That's the first time in two years I've worked with new homes."

Grantsville outbuilt Tooele in single-family homes in 2010 and 2011, and the first quarter of 2012 shows Grantsville outbuilding Tooele again. The cost of land is responsible for that trend, according to Sloan.

"The cost of land in Grantsville did not appreciate as fast as the land in Tooele city," said Sloan. "As a result, builders bought building lots in Grantsville for less than they could in Tooele city, making Grantsville a more attractive place to build."

Collings agrees with Sloan's assessment.

"You can find building for less in Grantsville," said Collings. "However as home prices stabilize we will see building in Tooele city begin to pick up, hopefully this year."

New single-family home construction in Tooele County reached 648 new homes in 2006 and then dropped to 183 in 2009, before rising slightly to 192 in 2011, according to the Utah Construction Database maintained by the Bureau of Economic and Business Research at the University of Utah.

The Tooele County Recreation Special Service District allocated $270,000 for 45 projects spread throughout the county for 2011, and is currently waiting to find out how much of the $800,000 in requests they received for 2012 they will be able to fund.

"The money we get comes through the county from the federal government's Payment in Lieu of Taxes," said Walt Shubert, a member of the service district board. "Hopefully we will get at least as much as we did last year."

Applications for funding are due annually on the first Wednesday in April. The service district board members then receive a copy of the applications at their meeting on the following Thursday and have a month to review the applications before their meeting on the first Thursday of May. That's when they find out how much money they have to allocate for the year, and they spend that meeting determining those allocations. The money is then paid out to the agency sponsoring each project as needed.

In 2011, the board received 60 applications for funding totaling $600,000.

"As a board we review each application individually and then we get together to discuss which ones we will fund," said Shubert. "In some cases we may only fund part of an application, since that allows us to fund more projects."

The largest project funded in 2011 was $30,000 for a playground at a new 29-acre park in Stansbury

Park, which is set to open later this spring. The board also allocated $20,000 for a five-foot-wide cement walking and running path around a park in Lake Point.

The board gave $15,000 each to parks in Terra and St. John to buy equipment and upgrades including fences, grass, and sprinkling systems.

"We love to see requests come in from these smaller communities," said Russ Steadman, a recreation service district board member. "That is where we can really make a difference. These smaller communities don't have the revenue for parks but the people that live there still need these type of facilities."

The special service district was created in 1989 for the purpose of providing recreation facilities and services throughout the county.

Of the 45 projects funded in 2011, 20 were for under $4,000 and included $3,000 for an equipment trailer for the girls softball league in Grantsville, $3,000 for uniforms for the American Legion baseball program, $3,000 for the Tooele City 4-H garden club, and $1,000 for a mobile pitching mound in Elton Park.

The funding is critical for the smaller rural communities, said Shubert.

"It makes big difference," said Shubert, who also serves as the mayor of Ophir. "Smaller towns just don't have the resources, but people from all over the county and outside the county use their facilities."

Shubert points out the $14,000 allocated to pay for adding hot water to the public rest rooms in Ophir and putting up signs on ATV trails in Ophir Canyon as examples of how the money is used in smaller communities.

"It also helps tourism in the county," said Shubert. "These facilities bring people into the county."

The five-member board of trustees for the special service district is appointed by the county commission and bears final responsibility for its budget and allocations. The current board members are Kent Baker, Russell Steadman, Walt Shubert, Lois McArthur and Travis McCluskey.

Schools to spend $5.1 million on capital projects

by Tim Gillie
STAFF WRITER

The Tooele County School Board approved a $5.1 million capital budget for 2012-13 on Tuesday.

The capital outlay budget is up $258,603, or 5.3 percent, from last year.

The capital budget includes $342,000 in items that Steve West, Tooele County School District Construction manager referred to as "life and safety" projects. The board approved these 10 projects at its meeting Tuesday so bids could be gathered and the projects started in time for completion by this fall.

The approved projects include $125,000 for an upgrade to the fire alarm system at Stansbury Park Elementary and $90,000 for an upgrade to the fire alarm system at the Early Learning Center by Northlake Elementary.

Also included was $30,000 for washers and dryers for schools that don't have them, $27,000 for 10 video camera and recorder units for buses, $25,000 to rebuild a boiler box at one of three elementary schools that needs to be rebuilt — boiler boxes at Overlake, Middle Canyon, and Willow Elementary Schools need to be rebuilt, one will be replaced this year — $20,000 for a loading dock and ramp for a new warehouse, $10,000 to replace doors at Grantsville High School, $5,500 to add ADA automatic doors at Northlake Elementary, $5,000 for a new water softener for the GHS kitchen, and $4,500 to repair an uneven concrete sidewalk at Copper Canyon Elementary.

The loading dock is for a new warehouse in the Tooele City Commercial Park that the district purchased a year ago to replace a building they were leasing. The washers and dryers are for custodians to wash mops, towels and rags. Currently the custodians are using washers and dryers located in kitchens in the schools — something the county health department does not like, according to West. The video recording units for buses will be used to monitor safety in and around busses. The monitors will record what happens on the bus as well as traffic around the bus.

"Occasionally we get complaints about a driver that cuts off another vehicle in traffic, and the recorders will let us check that out," said West. "They also will record what happens on the bus in case there is a concern expressed about student safety or behavior."

The capital outlay budget includes $2.5 million that will be used to make payments on bonds for the construction of Copper Canyon Elementary, Grantsville Elementary and the Community Learning Center.

The budget also includes $2.2 million for projects recommended by school staff and district officials, including asphalt repairs, roof repairs, fencing, district-wide custodial equipment, painting, flooring and ceiling repairs, copy machine replacement and new school busses.

The board did not approve specific items for the $2.2 million allocation, opting to spend more time reviewing staff recommendations for funding prioritized from the $12.8 million in requests. The district collects project requests from principals, maintenance staff, and department directors at the district office. A team that includes West, Superintendent Terry Linares, Assistant Superintendents Ken Luke and Dolene Pitt, along with Bruce Williams, business administrator, Hal Strain, special education director, and David Beacham, maintenance supervisor, then reviews the requests and prioritizes them. The school board is presented with a list showing all the requests received and the projects recommended for funding by the review group.

Looking over the list of projects, Scott Bryan, president of the school board, said he had questions about some of the items on the prioritized list.

"I am not ready to approve this list," said Bryan. "There are some deal breakers on here for me."

Bryan declined to discuss the list at the board meeting, requesting more time to review the list and send his comments to West by email.

The board voted to approve the top 10 projects and the budget amount for capital projects, but reserved voting on the remainder of the project list until a future board meeting.

The largest request on the recommended project list is $570,338 for five new school busses.

Other big-ticket items on the list include $300,000 for district-wide technology upgrades, $250,000 for roofing at Tooele Junior High School and East Elementary School, and $200,000 for asphalt work at Tooele Junior High School and Willow Elementary School.

"We gather all the requests and then go out to the schools and look at the projects before we prioritize them," said West. "We just don't have the money to do everything."

OUT & ABOUT

Puppy parenthood provides plenty of challenges

Life is full of numerous challenges that are thrust upon us. Then of course there are the challenges that sound like a good idea at first and turn out to be more challenging than previously thought.

My wife and I decided to make a little addition to our family of two that is definitely adding new struggles to our once-carefree life. We decided to pick up a nine-week-old Chocolate Labrador Retriever puppy and name her Mia.

If only puppies would act as cute as they look then having a new puppy in the house would be a breeze, and we would end up sleeping throughout the night. I guess we thought that having a puppy in the house would help us prepare in case we ever have a little baby of our own.

There are a few similarities to having a puppy and having a baby, I would imagine. There are the moments when Mia cries in the middle of the night when she needs to go outside or when she is hungry, just like a baby. We also have to clean up after the occasional accident when we weren't paying attention to Mia as she stared out the window. Puppies also eat a lot of food, but it is much easier to throw food in a dish than it is to feed a baby.

Aside from all the complaining about our puppy, I do have to admit that Mia is pretty well-behaved. We have had her for over a week and I have only heard her bark about four times. She doesn't like to talk much and when she does it is a little whine instead of a bellowing bark. I hope this lack of barking never changes.

Although it takes a little vigilance, Mia is doing well with the house training as well. She will usually stare out the back sliding glass door or give us a little whine to let us know she needs to go outside. There has been the occasional accident, but those are really few and far between.

I am also very thankful that she loves to sleep during the night as much as we do. The first night was a little rough as I am sure Mia missed her siblings and mother, and the home of her previous owner. After that first night though, Mia really calmed down and has come to understand that we need our sleep too and her whining has really been cut down.

Being responsible for a puppy has helped me and my wife Tiffany feel more like mature adults. Having a puppy that counts on us for her survival is not really a daunting task but it is different for two adults that were used to only caring about their own needs.

There also comes the reward of having a dog that just wants to play and keeps wagging her tail. The companionship that comes with a puppy far outweighs the challenges that come along with being responsible for one.

Gary Searle, chief deputy attorney for the Tooele County Attorney's Office, said he does not know exactly what the law in 1994 would have demanded of a bishop who was told of the commission of a crime, but incarceration because of his client's otherwise clean record, the time that has elapsed since the crime occurred, the man's cooperation with authorities, and getting sex offender treatment since charges were filed last August. White also cited the man's poor health, which requires him to take 10 different medications for an array of for her father's incarceration, Hogan said he urged the court to sentence the man to prison.

"I know the defendant has a host of medical problems, and I know our jail would probably squawk like crazy if they had to attend to them all, but I do think there has to be judgment on this case," Hogan said. "[The victim] should have no responsibility whatsoever for what happens today."

Adkins said while the length of time between when the abuse occurred and when it was reported to law enforcement did have some bearing on the sentence — because there are no indications that other victims were abused during the interim — he did not believe probation or home confinement was an appropriate punishment for such a crime.

"I simply cannot understand it," Adkins told the man. "You were the adult. You were the parent. You had the control and the child is totally blameless, and she has been deprived of a normal father-daughter relationship. If the court doesn't appropriately deal with this, it sends the message to others that this isn't important, that it doesn't matter. This is one of the most important matters the court has."

The man was sentenced to three concurrent sentences of one to 15 years in prison and a total of $30,000 in fines, which were suspended in lieu of 180 days in jail and 36 months probation with a $1,500 fine. The man will also have to complete sex offender treatment, as well as any other treatment recommendations suggested by therapists. His jail sentence began immediately.

Searle said while the sentence is lighter than sentences typically given for similar crimes, the family's request and the time since the abuse were influential on that sentencing.

"I think it has a lot to do with the time frame that's passed. There have been things that have happened in the family — healing, those kinds of things — which have gone on and they were looking for a result that would allow them to move forward rather than in a typical sex abuse case where the family's looking for some serious punishment," he said. "I absolutely think that was the reason for it. I think if the victim had come in and wanted him to go to prison, he would have gone to prison. But I think the judge deferred to what the victim wanted."

even if the bishop was legally required to report that crime to authorities, the bishop in this case would have been long past prosecution.

"We're talking about what the law would have been 18 years ago. Even if there was a law — again, I don't know — the statute of limitations would have expired," Searle said. "Any statute of limitations would have expired in 1998."

The man, who moved to southern Utah within the last four years, pled guilty to three charges of sexual abuse of a child, a second-degree felony, in February.

"I'm very sorry for what I did. It's been a very long time ago but I'm still sorry," the man said. "This would never happen again, if I could go back."

Last September, the man's 40-year-old son was sentenced to three concurrent sentences of five years to life in prison for sexually abusing his own teenage daughter at a farming property being used by the family in Salt Lake County. The younger man is also not being named to protect his victim's identity.

This case came about as a result of that case. The younger man self-reported his actions to authorities, and during the course of that investigation, which focused solely on the abuse of that man's daughter, other family members told authorities that abuse had occurred in the previous generation, as well, Searle said. Subsequent interviews with family members revealed the abuse against the older man's daughter.

The 67-year-old man's attorney, David White, argued against ailments, as a reason for Judge Robert Adkins to consider sentencing the man to home confinement.

"If the defendant was incarcerated in prison or jail, that in effect could very well be a life sentence," White said.

White added that imprisonment would remove the patriarch from a close-knit family, and the victim had stated that much of her healing and closure is due to those familial relations.

"Incarceration for [the defendant] at this point is absolutely not good for the victim or society," White said. "The victim in this case is very adamant that she doesn't want her father incarcerated."

Tooele County Attorney Doug Hogan said while the his office tries to communicate with victims and honor their wishes as much as possible, there is significant disagreement in this case. Hogan said one of the aspects cited as a reason for leniency by White — the man's cooperation — was of particular debate.

"There's a difference between voluntary and voluntary under threat of something that is coming," Hogan said. "He didn't stop the abuse voluntarily. The abuse continued until she told her mother and the family dynamics changed. I don't view that as a voluntary stopping of reprehensible behavior."

Hogan said he believes part of the victim's motivation in requesting that her father not be incarcerated is due to the reported recent improvement in family relations. Despite the man's medical problems, and concerns that the victim would be blamed by family members

TOOELE TRANSCRIPT BULLETIN

Author documents Hispanic migration to Tooele

by Rachel Madison
STAFF WRITER

When Danny Quintana moved to Tooele at the age of 8, it was a major culture shock. He wasn't white, he didn't speak English, and he had spent the first few years of his life in Taos, N.M.

"Here I was, dark-skinned, Hispanic, Catholic and a Spanish speaker," Quintana said. "I had a tough time with English because Spanish was my first language. We had moved to a white community that didn't understand us."

Things got easier for Quintana as he learned English and began to get involved in school activities, even participating on the wrestling team at Tooele High School, where he graduated in 1975, but he never forgot those feelings he had when he first moved to Tooele.

Now those feelings are the basis for Quintana's fourth book, "Caught in the Middle:

Danny Quintana

Stories of Hispanic Migration and Solutions to America's Immigration Dilemma." The book is about the journey of people from northern New Mexico and southern Colorado to places like Tooele, Ogden, Price, Denver and Las Vegas in search of work at defense industries, such as the Tooele Army Depot, and better life opportunities.

"There were a whole bunch of people after World War II that left their small communities and became urbanized," he said. "This book is about those people and the dilemma they are in by being caught in the middle of a political debate that they didn't create."

Quintana, who owns his own law firm in Salt Lake City called Quintana & Associates, said his Tooele roots gave him an advantage when writing this book.

"The book is about people from the Taos area that moved to Tooele," he said. "When the Tooele Army Depot was going fast and furious during the late '40s and early '50s, a bus would go to the Taos area and pick up people from Hispanic communities and bring them to Tooele to work."

Quintana said because of this, virtually all of the Hispanics in Tooele are from southern Colorado or northern New Mexico.

"They added a Spanish flavor to Tooele," he said.

He added that if Hispanics hadn't moved to Tooele, then the area wouldn't be diverse at all. The diversity these people brought through language, food and religion helped the area to become more cultural.

"The people prior to the Hispanics coming in were all Mormon, and the Hispanics brought the Catholics in," he said. "You can't forget that they brought some change [to Tooele]."

Some of the Tooele County residents Quintana interviewed for his book include Alex Pacheco, Danny Mondragon and Albert and Sylvia Arrellano. Quintana said it was important for him to interview these people because of their family history as well as their individual stories.

"Albert was a principal and teacher for many years in Tooele," Quintana said. "He came here from that Taos region. Then I interviewed Alex Pacheco. He works in a variety of fields, one of which is working with youth as a juvenile counselor. He's a real community activist."

Quintana said Mondragon's chapter was very compelling because of his unique story.

"Very few people overcome heroin addiction, but he did it," Quintana said. "He has done a wonderful job of trying to lead people on a straight path. The addiction gene and diabetes run very heavily in the Hispanic community. I don't know of one family that doesn't have one member without an addiction of some kind."

Quintana also interviewed a woman named Zetty Painter Garcia, who met her husband, Robert, while he was working at a mine near Stockton. She moved with him back to Taos.

"She had a unique story because she married Robert and moved to Taos, so she was a white, Mormon girl living with a Catholic Spaniard," he said.

Quintana interviewed more than 30 people for the book, which took him about six years to compile.

"I started working on it in 2006," he said. "This is one of the more interesting, entertaining projects I've done. I had a lot of wonderful moments doing this book that I quite enjoyed."

The book, which is now available for purchase, was printed by Beckham Publications. Quintana said he footed the bill for most of the printing because he'd prefer a larger return on his sales instead of a royalty.

"I have to make money on my books because the proceeds are used to deliver wheelchairs all over the world," he said. "My next wheelchair adventure will be to Rwanda, Africa. I have been to Thailand, Costa Rica and Afghanistan. I'll be doing this the rest of my life, as long as my health holds up."

Quintana said he has to raise another $40,000 from book sales before he can go to Rwanda. He plans on taking 200 wheelchairs and 25 sports wheelchairs to help the country outfit a Paralympics team. When he visits countries to deliver wheelchairs, he also holds a sports camp to teach wheelchair-bound children how to play wheelchair sports. He himself has been wheelchair bound since the age of 19 due to a condition called transverse myelitis, and is an avid tennis player.

Quintana is hosting a book signing at St. Marguerite's Catholic Church right after 5 p.m. Mass on Saturday, at approximately 6:30 p.m. He will also be giving a short lecture before the book signing.

Books can be purchased from Quintana directly by contacting him at danny_quintana@yahoo.com or through Barnes & Noble or Amazon.

Obesity

larger than average babies, but he doesn't think this comes from an insulin reaction or the fact that overweight women produce more insulin.

"They actually may not produce enough insulin," he said. "Women have transient periods of time when they have hyperglycemia, like when they eat a high-calorie meal."

Vered said when pregnant women have these periods of hyperglycemia, or high glucose in the blood, their body produces more insulin, but most of the time the baby is resistant to it. The baby's body then attempts to dilute the high level of glucose in its blood by drawing water out of its cells and into the bloodstream in an effort to dilute the sugar and excrete it in the urine.

"You can have a Michelin baby because of too many of those periods of hyperglycemia," Vered said.

Vered said a mother can contribute to her baby's obesity even by eating too large of a plate of fruit or drinking a cup of juice or soda.

"They can have a brief period of time, maybe 15 or 20 minutes of their blood sugar going high, but if they aren't able to reduce it fast enough, the baby feeds on the blood sugar and packs the weight on," Vered said.

Kori Hunt, registered nurse at HealthCare for Women, said on the other hand, if a mother has a high amount of blood sugar, the baby, instead of being resistant to insulin, will often start producing more insulin to lower the mother's blood sugar.

"Insulin makes you grow more and that's one of the reasons why the babies get bigger," she said. "The glucose will go to the baby and cause the baby's pancreas to release more insulin and that acts as a growth."

Dr. Cullen Archer, an OB/GYN at All Seasons Obstetrics and Gynecology in Tooele, said he hasn't noticed either an increase or decrease in the amount of obese babies being born in Tooele.

"It's staying about the same," he said. "From personal experiences, I'm not delivering bigger babies than I used to."

Archer said pregnant women are asked to take a test to determine whether or not they have gestational diabetes — basically permanent hyperglycemia. The test includes drinking a sugar water solution to see how the body reacts.

"When a woman comes in to drink the sugar water solution, we give them a drink with 50 grams of sugar and an hour later we draw their blood," Archer said. "If the concentration of sugar in the blood is 130 or higher, then 90 percent of gestational diabetes is caught."

Archer said if a woman shows a high concentration of blood sugar during this test, then they are asked to come in for another, more exhaustive test.

"The woman has to come back in and do a real diagnostic test," he said. "They have to come in fasting, and we draw their blood. Then they have to drink 100 grams of sugar water, and then we draw their blood one, two and three hours after drinking. Depending on what their blood sugar level is after that, it will determine if they have gestational diabetes."

Archer said large babies are typically born to women with gestational diabetes, but it's not always the case. Some people just tend to have larger babies because of genetics. However, because most of the Tooele Valley is just above 4,000 feet, Vered said women should be having smaller babies. Babies born at higher elevations are smaller due to several different factors, including decreasing oxygen tension, increasing maternal hemoglobin concentrations and decreasing maternal plasma volume with the increasing altitude.

"If you lived in San Diego or the Midwest, you should have bigger babies, but we should have smaller babies here and we don't," Vered said. "The average size of a baby in America is 7 pounds, 8 ounces, but we have a lot of babies that are 8, 9 and 10 pounds."

Vered said women who are obese, especially those who are 50 percent over their ideal weights, don't need to gain as much weight during pregnancy. Typically, he recommends that women gain 25 to 40 pounds, but an obese woman should only gain 10 to 15 pounds.

"Even if someone is overweight and they exercise, they can be healthy and their pregnancy would be healthy," Vered said.

Archer said women are still clear to exercise even when they are pregnant.

"They shouldn't do anything with high-impact abdominal trauma, but walking, running or riding a bike are all fine," he said. "They can do their usual workouts they did prior to getting pregnant."

In addition, Archer said by changing what they eat, women can decrease the risk of getting gestational diabetes. Hunt said women need to watch their glucose intake, which means limiting the amount of fruits, refined sugars and pastas they eat.

"You can't change your genetics, but you can change what you eat," Archer said. rachelm@tooeletranscript.com

Tooele County students' artwork on display at Salt Lake City library

Kristine Johnson
CORRESPONDENT

Artwork from students at Tooele High School and Excelsior Academy will be on display for six weeks at the Salt Lake City Public Library beginning this weekend.

The library is hosting the visual arts exhibit, called the First Nations Totemic Art Exhibit, with prints and drawings by more than 50 students from Tooele County.

The students' printed or hand-drawn works were inspired by the native art forms associated with the indigenous people who lived along the Pacific Northwest coastline of the United States and Canada — the people of the First Nations. The myths and legends from the indigenous people have helped the students create prints and drawings that match the feel of the indigenous people and their native culture.

"The teachers would first select their own type of media and then their students would go and design their original images," said Ellen Parker, project coordinator for the exhibit. "Whether it be hand-drawn or printed, all of the works are inspired by the cultural art form."

The culture and mythology from the lives of indigenous people were often influenced by their ties to plants, animals and the natural landscape around them. The myths would typically revolve around the respectful treatment of all animals, because they needed them to keep from starving. These early art works show many human, animal, and supernatural images that are very distinctive and stylized.

Brenton Peterson, art teacher at Excelsior Academy in Erda, said the students learned about this culture during classes, and have applied it to their individual projects.

"They learned about the Native Americans' beliefs and practices and what their environment was like," he said.

Excelsior Academy eighth-grader Bethany Begay's painting of an owl will be on display at the Salt Lake City Public Library. The exhibit features art inspired by Pacific North West indigenous tribes of North America.

"The art itself is so different from anything you'd see anywhere. It's based on animals, but it's abstract to the point where sometimes you can't even tell what the image is."

This is the third year schools from Tooele County and Parker have worked with the Salt Lake City Public Library to run a student art exhibit focusing on a social studies art theme.

"I work with the teachers on getting the students' artwork publicly displayed and the Salt Lake City Public Library has more than willingly accommodated us," Parker said. "They like our students' work. The library organizes about six exhibits each year. We generally have to propose an idea for a project close to a year in advance and fortunately, ours has been accepted."

Parker said she and the students' art teachers select the student work each year. This year 20 hand-drawn and painted images from eighth graders at Excelsior Academy and 32 ink prints from Tooele High School students will be featured.

"Not every single student who participated got in," Petersen said. "It's kind of like a juried show. It's a big deal for these kids to be featured, especially for my students who are in eighth grade. This is the first time for them to have any of their art work displayed."

The opening reception for the First Nations Totemic Art Exhibit will be Saturday from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at the Salt Lake City Public Library. The exhibit will be on display until June 16.

"It's always important to the students, families and teachers to have their art work publicly displayed," Parker said. "There are some great pieces at the exhibit."

Rodger Blair Jenks

Rodger Blair Jenks quietly returned home to his Heavenly Father on April 18. He is the son of William Lavon Jenks and Delsa Jolly Jenks. He was born on Dec. 31, 1934, almost being a New Year's baby. Rodger had an explorer-type personality and was always moving around the country finding all types of jobs. He finally settled in Grantsville where he has been for the last 14 years. He was an active member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He is survived by two sisters, Glenda Kearns and Corliss Dunbar, one brother, Donnie Jenks, and one son, Rodger Kim Jenks. Waiting to meet him in heaven are his parents and two sisters, Vardella Smithhart and Velva Phelps. Services will be held April 21 with a viewing at the Willow Creek Community Center, 236 W. Plum Street, Grantsville, from 11 a.m. to noon. A graveside service will follow at the Redwood Memorial Cemetery, 6500 S. Redwood Road, West Jordan.

Philip R. Jordan

Our beloved brother passed away March 17. Phil was born on June 5, 1949 to Edith Berry Jordan and Roy Jordan. He graduated from Tooele High School after which he joined the Air Force. Upon his return he enrolled and graduated from Salt Lake Community College and Weber State University. He worked at Dugway Proving Grounds before moving to Lubbock, Texas, where he was employed with the federal government until health problems forced him to retire. Phil is survived by sisters Marlene Kearns and Marilyn Richins (Jon), brother Ken Mecham (Fran) and a very special friend, Jeri Ackerd.

Graveside services will be held April 21 at 1 p.m. in the Tooele City Cemetery.

Norma Hammond Haley Dean

Norma Hammond Haley Dean was born April 14, 1921 to Datus and Bertha Hammond in Salt Lake City. Norma's father was instrumental in establishing the boy scout organization in Utah. Being the oldest of five sisters, Norma spent her childhood as a boy scout. She hiked, fished, camped and was throughout her life proud of these adventures. Norma graduated from South High School before attending Utah State University and then the University of Utah where she studied education. Norma married John Jarvies Haley who gave his life to our country as a fighter pilot serving in the Air Force. Together they had three wonderful boys: Scott, Mark and John. On Feb. 10, 1954, Norma married her darling, Kenneth W. Dean, and they with Norma's three rambunctious little boys (Scott, Mark, John) and Kenneth's lovely little girl (Barbara) became a family. Roger and Patricia followed, completing the brood. Ken and Norma were lifelong members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Together they served a service mission. On Dec. 27, 2008, Ken and Norma were sealed in the Salt Lake City Temple, fulfilling a lifetime desire. It was a treasured moment for their family to celebrate the 89-year-old newlyweds. Norma traveled the world. She loved new places, restaurants and shopping. Maui was a home away from home for Norma and Kenneth. They became true islanders during the winters they spent there with their friends and family. Norma was an amazing cook. We will forever hunger for her potato salad, rolls, spaghetti sauce, mustard relish, chicken goop and cookies. Norma was a generous host and no one left her home hungry. Norma was an elegant woman. She loved pretty things and created a home and a life that reflected that. She went to the beauty shop every week. Her toes, fingers and lips all shared the same hue. Her mother's art hung on her walls and she had a pair of Keds and a bracelet to match every blouse. Family was Norma's life. She devoted every moment to serving, supporting and championing her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Our favorites were her favorites. She shared our successes and made a celebration out of the smallest event. Anyone loved by Norma knows a special, unconditional kind of love. It is her gift to the world that anyone loved by her will continue to love as she did: perfectly. Norma is survived by her children: Scott (Ron Calvert), Barbara Holmes, Mark (Leslie), John (Karen), Roger (Marsha), Patricia (Scott) Sorenson, 25 grandchildren and 35 great-grandchildren. Funeral services will be held April 20 at 12:30 p.m. at the Tooele 13th Ward, 1025 Southwest Drive. A viewing will be held from 10 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Interment, Tooele City Cemetery. Assisted by Aspen Funeral Services. The family of Norma Dean wishes to express their heartfelt thanks to the staff of Mountain West Hospice. They are administering angels. Over the years she has come to love all the ladies in the office and nurses at Dr. Charles Holt's medical practice. She considered Dr. Holt and Julia dear friends and she loved Darin Smith as a grandson. Thank you all so much.

Tooele Trying to Understand Chicanos, Superintendent Asserts

Editor's note: This is part of a series of columns reprinted verbatim from past issues of the Transcript-Bulletin. The series is intended to provide historical snapshots of the life and times of the county.

"We are doing things to help our faculties understand the Spanish culture," Clarke Johnsen, superintendent of Tooele County School District, said today.

Johnsen's comment came in the wake of reports in the Salt Lake City press of charges of harassment and segregation of Spanish-speaking persons in the Tooele area.

LAST WEEK members of SOCIO (the Spanish speaking Organization for Community Integrity and Opportunity) told Gov. Calvin L. Rampton that students expelled for misconduct from the Tooele High School now attend school in an annex, which results in de facto segregation. The majority of the students attending the special continuation school happen to be Chicanos.

The complaints against the district came during a regular monthly meeting between the governor and SOCIO.

Johnsen said the students were expelled because some kind of positive action had to be taken against the disruption they were causing.

"I supported the action but felt that they were still my responsibility," he said.

He indicated that he believed the school district had an obligation to provide an alternative method for those students to gain an education.

"IT DOESN'T matter to us who the kids are," he continued. "It's the same for all kids but I've always felt that we needed a continuation school [a classroom away from the regular school campus] where we could establish a better student-to-teacher ratio, and where students who cannot function in a regular school station can gain the education that is their right."

Johnsen said schools have an obligation to society to prepare students to become self-sustaining adults who are responsible citizens and (if possible) live happy lives.

"These are the things we want for all students," he said. "We have to become aware that other cultures are important and we're trying to do this particularly at Tooele High School."

The superintendent said that with the assistance of others outside of the district, including the University of Utah, special inservice programs designed to meet this goal had been initiated.

"We know we shouldn't try to make every student over into the Anglo image," he said.

COMPLAINTS against the district are the results of persons not getting the facts of the situation and not taking into account what has gone on in the past, he added.

Rampton said the program providing those expelled with the opportunity to continue their education was a good idea but it resulted in de facto segregation. He indicated that he would talk with Dr. Walter D. Talbot, state superintendent of public instruction, about the matter.

Johnsen said that as the school year ends and "we assess the program we'll be able to see that it has done some good for the kids."

Three high school students honored for Key Club accomplishments

by Siera Gomez
CORRESPONDENT

Three Tooele County students were honored Tuesday by the Tooele Kiwanis Club for their achievements at the annual Key Club district convention that took place in Boise, Idaho, from March 30 to April 1.

Key Club, which is a program sponsored by Kiwanis for high school students, is an international service organization with clubs around the world. Members of Key Club are focused on service in their communities, and occasionally on a larger scale as well.

At the convention, Carlie Hughes, a junior at Grantsville High School and the current Grantsville Key Club president, was elected to become the new Key Club governor for all of the Utah-Idaho District. The elec-water rights in the Tooele Valley now have to be acquired from an existing water rights holder.

Water rights in Tooele Valley were further complicated in 2008 when the Division of Water Rights divided the valley into three zones, according to groundwater recharge flow. The western zone includes Grantsville City, the central zone includes Erda and most of Tooele City, and the eastern zone includes Lake Point and a portion of eastern Tooele City. The movement of water rights between the zones is restricted. No water right can be moved into the eastern zone, while a water right in the eastern zone may be moved to any of the other two zones. This policy made water rights in the eastern zone more expensive.

The two schools that need water rights are located in the central zone.

Water rights are also integrally tied to how the water is used. A water right may be designated for such uses as domestic, industrial, irrigation or stock watering.

An application to change the type of use of water rights may result in a change in the amount of water allowed to be used annually, because the type of use effects the amount of the water that recharges the aquifer from where the water was withdrawn.

All of these factors, including where the water comes from, where it will be used, and what it will be used for affect the price of water.

The Utah Water Exchange, a website that lists water rights for sale throughout Utah, currently lists water rights for sale in Erda at $5,000 for an acre foot and water rights in Lake Point at $10,000 per foot.

At that price range, the school district may have to pay between $132,500 and $265,000 for 26.5 acre feet of water, assuming that the advertised water is culinary water that can be used on the southeast part of Tooele City.

The district has hired Rod

Mills, and engineer with Ensign Engineering with 30 years experience in water rights, to help prepare the request for proposals and evaluate the proposals that are returned.

The school district anticipated the need to buy water rights when they bonded for the new buildings.

"We have should have enough money left over in the bond accounts for the schools to cover the cost of the water," Terry Linares, Tooele County School District superintendent, told the school board during their April 17 meeting.

As part of the governor's duties, she will plan the convention for next year, as well as plan the training meetings for the next governor and lieutenant governor, and numerous Key Club workshops and projects. She will also liaison with International Key Club leadership to stay in line with their guidelines.

"I am so impressed with this girl," said Sandy Critchlow, Kiwanis President of Tooele County, about Hughes. "I have only met her a couple of times, but it is obvious to me that she is a student who has it going on."

Kate Bryant, a sophomore at Stansbury High School, was chosen to be one of the district's lieutenant governors of the Utah-Idaho district, a position over District 8A, which spans Tooele County as well as Hunter and Granger High School's Key Clubs.

Finally, Hayley Mander, a senior at Grantsville High School and the Key Club secretary, was chosen as one of five recipients in the Utah-Idaho district of a $1,000 scholarship from the Kiwanis district. She had to submit an essay on her experience in Key Club as well as have been involved in the club for four years.

"There were a lot of people applying for it, and I was thinking I probably wouldn't get it because they're some of the smartest kids I've ever met in my life," said Mander. "I think that my activity in my school's extracurricular activities must have set me apart, because I am involved in a lot."

Also contributing to her credentials in receiving the award, Mander has maintained a 3.9 grade point average and is involved with soccer, the National Honor Society and the bowling club.

The three students were guests for lunch at the Tooele Kiwanis Club's weekly meeting at Sostanza Grill in Tooele.

"I just find it phenomenal that right here in our own backyard we have so many young people that are achieving so much, when there are so many youth in the world that just aren't," Critchlow stated.

Quick-start Cowboys pummel Morgan

by Jake Gordon

STAFF WRITER

Grantsville got the hot start it needed in a game that went a long way in the Region 11 standings. Morgan and Grantsville were both tied for second in region with 4-2 records, but the early offense for the Cowboys was enough for them to be sitting alone in second place after Tuesday afternoon.

Grantsville scored three runs in each of the first two innings and that was plenty of run support for Dalen Erickson on the mound. Erickson didn't allow Morgan to get on the scoreboard as Grantsville pulled out a big 9-0 victory in Grantsville.

"I don't think that we ever allowed a runner to get in scoring position against Morgan," said Grantsville coach Loren Anderson. "I don't even think Dalen (Erickson) had his best stuff out there but he still picked up the win."

Erickson only allowed three hits to Morgan while striking out six in the victory. Kelby Landon led the way for the Cowboys at the top of the lineup by going 2-for-3 with a double and a single while scoring on three different occasions.

After shutting down Morgan in the top of the first, Grantsville went right to work in the bottom half. The Cowboys loaded the bases when Landon and Skyler Cloward walked and Quinton Smith reached on an error.

Connor Turner brought in the first run with a sacrifice fly to right for a 1-0 lead. Erickson helped his own cause on the mound by laying down a bunt that scored Smith and then a Morgan error on the play allowed Cloward to score to give Grantsville a 3-0 lead after one.

The scoring continued in the second when Ky Fisher started it with a one-out single and then reached third on a Morgan error. Fisher eventually scored on another Morgan error for a 4-0 lead.

Grantsville scored all three of their runs in the second as a direct result of errors on the Trojans. Landon scored for the second time in the game on a throwing error and then Smith also came in on a later error for a 6-0 lead after two innings.

With the early run support, Erickson settled in on the mound and actually didn't allow a Morgan player to reach second base the entire game. With only six strikeouts, Erickson had a solid defensive effort behind him to secure the shutout.

After taking a few innings off scoring, Grantsville looked to add a few insurance runs in the sixth. Fisher started the inning with a walk and Landon followed with a single. Fisher scored on a Morgan error for a 7-0 lead.

Turner brought in his second run of the game with a ground out to the right side to score Landon and then Erickson added the finishing touches with a RBI double to right-center for a 9-0 lead.

With the spacious lead, Erickson shut down Morgan in the seventh and got them to go three up and three down to secure the victory.

Grantsville will look to continue its winning ways when they travel to face Ogden on Friday at 3:30 p.m.

Stansbury junior Jocelyn Kaufman gets ready to throw the ball to first base on April 3 against Tooele. Kaufman made a tag at home plate after a great throw by rightfielder Kilee Christiansen to nab a Bear River runner in a game on Wednesday.

Bears strike early in victory over Stansbury

by Mark Watson

SPORTS EDITOR

Stansbury shut out Bear River for five innings Wednesday in Garland. Bear River runners did not cross the plate in the second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth innings. It was the first inning that caused all the pain for the Stallions.

The Bears scored all their runs in the opening inning with a walk, two singles and a home run to jump out to an early 4-0 lead. With four runs in and no outs and a runner at third base Beth Chipman came on in relief of Katelyn Robinson. Chipman struck out the next batter and it looked like the Bears would score a fifth run with a fly ball to right. But right fielder Kilee Christiansen made a terrific throw to catcher Jocelyn Kaufman to nail the runner trying to score from third base to end the inning.

The Stallions were able to put runners at the corners in the top of the first inning, but left them on base.

It looked like the shelling might continue in the bottom of the second when the Bears put runners at second and third with no outs. Chipman then got two pop outs and a ground out to leave the Bears stranded.

Getting that one run to end the game proved difficult for both Stansbury and Bear River Tuesday afternoon in Garland. Finally, after being on the field for more than three hours, the Stallions got four runs in the top of the 14th inning to defeat the Bears 9-5.

The game was tied at 2-2 after three innings, 3-3 after eight innings and 5-5 after nine innings. Neither team scored in innings 10 through 13 until the 14th inning when the Stallions finally ended it keep their 7-0 region record intact.

"When it started to get to those later extra innings I just wanted the game to end," said Stansbury starting pitcher Jesse Clingman. "I didn't want us to do something little and stupid during those late extra innings which would let them win the game."

Leading 5-3 and heading to the bottom of ninth, the Stallions made a pair of errors in the field which allowed the Bears to score twice and keep the game alive.

Then in the bottom of the 10th the Bears had a runner at third base with only one out and they made a blunder when the runner broke for home with the batter swinging through the pitch giving the Stallions an easy put out at home plate to end the threat.

Grantsville won their third singles match and their first doubles match fairly easy, but to come away with the team victory it all came down to second doubles against Bear River.

After dropping the second set 7-5 to level the sets at 1-1, Jacob May and Dallin Dalton went back to business and ran away with the third set 6-1 to help Grantsville clinch a 3-2 team victory over Bear River in Garland Tuesday afternoon.

"After it was all over and done, I was happy that we got the win as a team," said Grantsville coach Scott Mouritsen. "My third singles and both doubles teams have been holding true for us."

First doubles team of Devin Orgill and Zac Garrard made the quickest work of Bear River as they only dropped one single game to their opponents Clayton Welch and Nathan Evans.

Orgill and Garrard dropped the game in the first set 6-1 and then went on to blank their opponents in the second set 6-0.

Tyler Colson took care of business at third singles for Grantsville over Garrett Fronk. Colson cruised to a 6-2 victory in the first set and then closed out the match with a 6-4 victory in the second.

May and Dalton were able to win their first set 6-3 over Bear River's Mich Walker and Derek Seals. In the second set however, Walker and Seals fought back to take the second 7-5.

May and Dalton regrouped for Grantsville in the third and made quick work in the 6-1 victory to seal the team match for Grantsville.

First and second singles were nearly victories for the Cowboys as each match went into a third set.

Tanner Elsholz at second singles for Grantsville appeared to be cruising when he won the first set 6-2 over Augmon Jolley. The second set was a different story as Jolley fired back for a 6-2 victory his own in the second set and then carried that momentum into the third to seal the

RHHS shuts out Wendover 3-0 in 2A soccer battle in Salt Lake

by Jake Gordon

Allowing a goal three minutes into a soccer game really didn't bode well for Wendover. That goal in the third minute started a half that saw Rowland Hall build a 3-0 lead. The second half was much better for the Wildcats but Rowland Hall didn't let Wendover get any closer and even added an additional goal for a 4-0 victory Wednesday afternoon in Salt Lake City.

Michael Thompson was able to score a goal in each half for Rowland Hall to lead the Winged Lions to victory. Lucius Bynum and Jonathan Bebbington each scored a goal for Rowland Hall near the end of the first half.

Rowland Hall took control of the game in the opening minutes as Emir Rahislic sent in a corner kick in the third minute which was deflected a couple times and then found the feet of Thompson.

With a golden opportunity, Thompson was able to bury the ball into the net to give the Winged Lions a 1-0 lead.

Wendover didn't back down after falling behind early. Joseph Ruiz and Luis Perez each created chances in the opening 20 minutes but couldn't get a shot to go in.

Cesar Contreras probably had the best shot on goal for the Wildcats when he had a free kick from about 22 yards out. Contreras nailed his shot on frame but it was turned away by the keeper in the 19th minute.

Wendover played with energy on the offensive end as Moises Mayo also contributed to give the Wildcats their chances. Unfortunately, all their efforts didn't turn into an equalizing goal.

Rowland Hall stepped up their efforts in the final two minutes of the first half. Bynum found space to dribble the ball just above the box and ripped a shot in the 38th minute that gave the Winged Lions a 2-0 advantage.

Just before the halftime whistle, John Gilbert kicked a well-placed cross right at the feet of Bebbington for a close-range goal and a 3-0 lead heading into the half.

back and enjoy their lead as they applied constant pressure on the offensive end to open the second half. Gilbert and Thompson each created a few chances but it was Thompson that netted the fourth Rowland Hall goal.

Thompson was the first to get to the loose ball in the 48th minute and buried it into the net for a 4-0 advantage. Wendover did better defensively in the second half but they spent so much time with the ball in their half of the pitch that they had a hard time constructing offensive chances.

Contreras had a decent shot with a free kick that was cleared out in the 56th minute. Perez also placed a cross in the 70th minute that was cleared out by the Rowland Hall defenders. The Winged Lions were able to keep Wendover from scoring to secure the shutout.

With the loss, Wendover now falls to 3-3 in the 2A Central Region and will look to rebound when they host Maeser Prep Friday at 4 p.m.

I think they were trying for a squeeze play and both guys missed the sign," Clingman said.

With one out in the 14th, Chandler Staley walked and then Jesse Clingman drilled a double to left-center which put Staley at third. Bear River walked Filip Anderson to load the bases and then Trevor Clingman smacked at two-run single to make it 7-5 for the Stallions. Dallas Jones laid down a sacrifice bunt to score Anderson and Trevor Clingman scored when the Bear River catcher tried to pick him off at third base and hit Clingman with the ball careening away from third base allowing Clingman to run home.

Stansbury pitching was solid considering only two of the Bears' runs through 14 innings were earned runs. The Stallion pitchers recorded 21 strikeouts in the game. Starter Jesse Clingman worked nine innings and struck out 15. Jake Witkowski came on to throw three shutout innings with three strikeouts, and Dallas

Jones earned the victory on the mound with two shutout innings and three strikeouts.

"Our pitching has been really good and that's the best Jesse's thrown all year," said Stansbury coach Ray Clinton. "He was really on target and allowed only two walks through nine innings."

Bear River pitching was also good with starter Taylor Ramsdell pitching 11 and one-third innings. "We did have 16 hits through 14 innings, but we just couldn't string them together," Clinton said. "It's tough to go up to Bear River and get a win; we were lucky to come away with a victory. They feel real comfortable in their home park."

With the game tied at 2-2, the Stallions inched ahead 3-2 in the top of the fourth when Marcos Chacon walked and Jackson Clausen came on to run. Clausen went to second on a fielder's choice, third on a steal and scored on a sacrifice fly by Trevor Clingman.

Bear River scored in the sixth to tie it again at 3-3. Neither team scored in the seventh or eighth, but it looked like the Stallions might end the game when they scored twice in the top of the ninth. Trevor Clingman hit a bloop single to right and Jarrett Anderson reached base on a bunt. An intentional walk to Wyatt Branch loaded the bases with one out. Tyson Haddon was hit by a pitch to bring in Trevor Clingman and Jarret Anderson scored on a double by Witkowski.

A pair of errors and a pair of singles allowed Bear River to keep the game alive with two runs of their own in the bottom of the ninth.

Two Stallions reached put two on base in the 12th, but the rally ended with a double play by the Bears. Two Bears reached on base with one out in the bottom of the 12th, but Witkowski got a strikeout for out no. 2 and a pop out for out no. 3. Neither team could get a runner on base in the 13th innings and then the Stallions erupted for four runs in the 14th. The Bears picked up a double with two outs in the bottom of the 14th, but left him stranded.

The Stallions host Ben Lomond on Monday and play at Ogden on Tuesday.

Thirteen seniors represented Stansbury High School at the Wasatch Front Regional semi-final Sterling Scholar judging at Copper Hills High School in February.

The Sterling Scholar Awards are sponsored by the Deseret News and KSL 5 Television. The program publicly recognizes high school seniors from 57 high schools along the Wasatch Front for outstanding academics, stellar leadership, exemplary citizenship and exceptional service to school and community. A total of 716 students competed in 13 categories at the semi-final competition. Every Sterling Scholar must complete a 20-page portfolio documenting their academic achievements, leadership and service. They are personally interviewed at the semi-final competition by a panel of three judges who are experts in the various categories.

Fifteen finalists in each category are selected to move on in the competition. The finalists again compete with their portfolios and another interview with three new judges. A winner and two runners-up in each category are announced at the Sterling Scholar Award ceremony, which was held at Cottonwood High School in March.

SHS's first-ever Sterling Scholar runner-up was Amanda Howa. She was selected as one of three top scholars in the category of skilled and technical sciences after competing against 57 high-achieving seniors in her field.

GARDEN SPOT

Use color to your advantage to create an attractive garden

After a long, gray winter, most people look forward with some degree of anticipation to the return of color to the landscape. Each season has its own colors and with careful planning, changing color can be a part of the landscape year round.

Arrange your landscape with a focal point. It could be an attractive tree or shrub or architectural features. Perhaps you have a distant view that deserves to be the center of interest. Frame it with trees, shrubs and with careful features that are colorful and attractive.

Nature frolics with color but a little planning is in order to get attractive landscape designs. When you plant to put color into your yard the basics of high school art classes and the color wheel come into play. Cool colors like blue, green and soft pastels blend to make an area seem larger and very calm. Warm colors like oranges, reds, golds and yellows are vibrant and exciting. Use a warm or cool color theme to fit these purposes. Consider the colors of the sky, the greenery of foliage and natural features that provide part of the color show you seek. While it is not true of mixing colors in clothing, green is the neutral shade in the landscape, which goes with and forms a backdrop to everything.

Diane Sagers

On a color wheel, red, yellow and blue are the primary colors and all other colors come from mixtures of these. The primary colors are very strong and using more than two of the three together tends to make a raucous combination.

If you put analogous colors — hues that are next to one another on the color wheel such as purple and red or green and gold — together, you get a peaceful and sophisticated look.

Complementary colors accentuate each other. They are found opposite one another on a color wheel. Green is complementary to red, orange to blue and purple to yellow. In terms of light, white is a mixture of all colors, but in a flower bed, white can be used to accentuate other colors.

Contrasting colors, which are two steps away from each other on the color wheel, put high energy, action and vigor into a design.

Consider the effects that colors make emotionally as they play off one another. Since plants are constantly growing and changing, there will be color variations you can capture through the season. That tree with plain green leaves during the summer months might explode into a mass of fiery oranges and reds as fall moves in. That same tree might start the spring season with masses of pastel blossoms. Shades of bark and evergreen foliage put some color into an otherwise drab winter season. Variations of textures, shapes and sizes add to the interest. Plants also flower at varying times. With some planning, you can have something in bloom throughout the entire season. As one plant moves to a different phase, another will come into bloom or show up in some other way.

As you consider your options you know that there are thou-

Diane Sagers

Seasonal colors change as spring bulbs decline and summer annuals are planted in their place. However, after their flowers decline, some of the spring perennials like the bridal veil bush at the rear of this photo will continue through the season and provide a great backdrop for other plants.

sands of plants available for the landscape in all sizes, shapes and colors. It can be daunting to choose among them. Take time to look at mature versions in catalogs and nurseries so you know what you can expect in terms of color. Magazines often offer ideas for attractive landscape designs. Before you buy, consider the growth requirements of the plants so you don't spend your outdoor time providing life support for your acquisitions.

Many annuals bloom throughout the entire growing season and finish with frost. Perennials can provide color throughout the year. Choose some plants that bloom in the spring, some that bloom in summer and some that bloom in autumn. Some plants bloom on into the beginning of the next season providing garden interest during transition periods.

Sometimes plants that bloom in the spring will remain green and attractive after the blossoms are spent and will provide a backdrop throughout the summer for summer plants. For example arabis, aubretia and basket of gold provide a riot of purple, white and yellow blooms in the spring month and then settle down as attractive foliage ground covers throughout the rest of the season.

Don't overlook ornamental grasses as part of your garden scheme. They provide variations in texture, height and even color. Some have striped or colored leaves, and during the summer and winter they may turn brown with seed heads that form interesting textures against the snow or sky.

Use the basics of color design and consider textures, shape, form and size to create truly artistic garden areas in your landscape.

WHAT DOES THE BIBLE SAY . . . About The Everlasting Gospel?

The Bible teaches that God cannot lie, yet many claim that God did lie. In Matthew 5:18, Jesus mentions that "Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled." Then Paul, the Apostle, writes in 2 Timothy 3:16-17, "All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness: 17 That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." Notice that the scriptures are from God and will make a man "perfect" or complete. God created the world, if he can do that, he can keep the Bible for us today. If he cannot do this, maybe your god is too small.

Peter the Apostle writes in 2 Peter 1:3, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue:" If God has given us ALL THINGS, what is lacking? What else can he give us if we have all things? Christians need nothing but the Bible. Creeds and tradition of men, other so-call inspired writings of men, cannot do what the Bible can do. There are more than 30,000 copies (whole or in-part) of the New Testament so we know the Bible is complete and authoritative. Trust God, not man!

PIONEER PROSE

Pioneers got creative with available materials in order to make necessary tools Come take a walk with me back in time, along a trail less traveled. Pioneer tools are an example of ingenuity and common sense. Pioneers in the mid-1800s couldn't go back 1,000 miles to a hardware store and buy new axes, shovels, scythes, cauldrons, ox and mule shoes. When eating utensils and dishes were broken, they had to be replaced and were handmade from wood. Some unique tools were silk worms raised by pioneer women who harvested silk from their webs and spun it into dresses, scarves and infant wear.

In the kitchen, when pans, wash tubs and cauldrons developed leaks, some method had to be devised for repair. Sometimes they were handcarved from a tree branch and forks and spoons were carved in a similar fashion.

A butter churn was made from a tree stump hollowed out, with a wooden handle and wooden paddles which was then turned to churn the butter inside. Butter molds and paddles were carved from wood. The molds were square-box shaped with a wooden handle and square bottom that pressed into the box on the lump of butter until all the whey was squeezed out. Then, the butter was placed into cold water to chill. Buttermilk separated by this process was stored in tin or wooden pitchers which made it a mild sweet drink. At the DUP museum in Tooele in the pioneer cabin has a handmade wooden table on which sits a butter mold and paddle used to press the butter.

Patricia Holden

Beds, cradles, tables and chairs were handcarved from wood harvested by the pioneers. Some were intricately carved, creating beauty in a sometimes harsh land. Notice the carving on the handmade chairs in the cabin on site at the museum and see the leather strings used to tie the legs and seat together, as well as the leather which covers the chair back and seat.

Almost anything they needed, pioneers in the 1800s made. Brooms had long, wooden handles with wild stiff grasses for the sweep, tied on with rawhide. Scythes, pitchforks and rakes were made from tree branches. Finding the perfect branch took time because it had to be a certain size and needed the proper amount of limbs coming off it all going the same way to make the forks, and the same for the teeth of the rake. The scythe was a different matter needing a thick limb, which had to curve in the right direction at the bottom. From there it went to the forge where a piece of metal was sharpened and fitted onto the curve, so it could be used as a handheld cutting tool to harvest crops.

Pioneer men used forges to work iron into different tools. They used a great deal of charcoal for the fire in the forge.

To keep it going and burning extremely hot, a tall bellows was attached to the forge from the side, with a hand crank to wind it up and blow air into it. Often a boy would be assigned the chore of cranking bellows until it roared, while the blacksmith worked the metal. A necessity was the workbench and often a large tree was selected and cut down, leaving the stump as tall as the blacksmith needed. Then he built his shop around it so he had a place for the anvil and his tools. Many of these workbench stumps can be found across the West and in ghost towns. During the process of building, cutting and working the metal in a blacksmith shop, the metal turned black, hence the name "blacksmith." Tongs for holding hot metal and hammers were necessary to the blacksmith.

A way had to be determined to make nails, and since square headed nails were easier to make than round, they identify the era they were made and used in when found today.

Hinges for gates, wagons and doors, as well as flatirons and their bases were made with the forge. Look for the flatiron in the museum with the muleshoe handle. Someone really needed that iron despite its handle being broken off. During the process to repair farm implements, iron would be heated until it melted. Then, the flux was spooned across the two pieces, forming a rough "weld" that usually held for a long time. Oxen, mule and horse shoes were made by the blacksmith to protect the animal's hooves. A piece of metal would be heated to white hot, pounded on the anvil into the rough shape of the hoof. Then, it was dipped into cold water to temper so it wouldn't shatter and was nailed onto the hoof.

An anvil was a heavy tool necessary for a pioneer in working with repairs or bending metal to a certain shape. It had a round hole on top and a square hole, with a point at one end. The holes in the anvil helped to shape a metal rod into a square point or round point. Much metal shaping was done using the anvil.

Another pioneer "tool" used by pioneers was the wild horse corral. Capturing wild mules and horses for plowing and riding was a help to the farmers and ranchers in the West. If you find one you may imagine a ghost herd racing into the hidden corral, with the poles left leaning against the gate waiting to be shoved into place behind them.

Pioneer tools are many within the walls of the Tooele County Company DUP museum in Tooele. Be sure to visit when it opens in May, and try to identify the use to which each tool was put.

HORSE WHISPERER

What to expect when attending a horsemanship or colt starting clinic

Even though I am invited to hold horsemanship clinics all over the western United States, I still enjoy and very much benefit from attending horsemanship clinics of other great horsemen, even in different disciplines. I am always trying to learn more because you can never gain enough knowledge.

When attending a clinic, you should always go with an open mind and be willing to try what the clinician suggests, even though it might be new to you. In most clinics there are a variety of levels in both horses and riders with many different issues. When I attend a clinic I try to pay close attention to all the other horses and their problems, not just my own. This is a great way to pick up training tips and learn how to deal with other concerns that may arise with your horse down the road.

When planning to attend a clinic, you should be prepared to spend four to six hours with your horse each day. Plan on some ground work, a lot of riding and some intense lecture and discussions on horsemanship, proper gear, nutrition, hoof care and dentistry. It is also helpful to take notes if you can and definitely be physically prepared to ride hard. I find that in a horsemanship class it is a good idea to take a more advanced horse so that you can move him forward quicker. That way when you take him home you've gained the knowledge to advance your younger horses even further.

Shamus Haws

In colt starting clinics, I prefer to take a horse that is just halter broke and old enough to be started under saddle. You will start with your horse never being rode before and by the end of the three-day clinic, you will have ridden him through trail obstacles, in an arena setting and maybe even on a trail.

When attending a clinic you should also expect to learn how to gain control of all five major body parts of your horse, obtain a soft feel, overcome challenging obstacles, possibly handle cattle, build confidence in both horse and rider, and most importantly, create a confident and willing partnership with your horse. Oftentimes, top professionals in the horse industry, like veterinarians, farriers, nutritional experts and saddle makers will come and speak at the clinics so that everyone can become well-rounded in their knowledge of horses.

Whether you decide to attend a colt starting, cow working or horsemanship clinic, it's important that you and your horse always strive to establish a partnership. As a young man I quite often heard, "Who's in charge, you or the horse?" I don't believe that is the way it should be. I want teamwork. You and your horse need to work together. When you create this partnership with your horse, he will become more willing, responsive, soft and more likely to be there with you every step of the way.

Understanding and training horses is in Shamus Haws' blood, but his passion is helping horses with human problems. Haws will be holding a clinic April 20-22 at the Erda Arena in Erda. Colt starting is from 8 a.m. to noon with horsemanship from 1 to 5 p.m. each day. Limited participant space available. Spectators are free to watch and learn. ## U.S. POSTAL SERVICE GOES GREENER

The United States Postal Service has been making changes that are reducing its carbon footprint, making the _____ of your birthday cards, pen pal letters and other mail more “green.”

Burning fossil fuels, driving a car for example, produce carbon dioxide (CO2). These activities make up a person's carbon footprint.

Mail is delivered by bicycle in Arizona and Florida. _____ vehicles have been delivering mail in New York City since 2004.

Three-wheel electric vehicles are being tested in some areas as possible _____ for gasoline-powered delivery vehicles in Texas, California, Florida and Arizona.

Electric _____ costs per mile are less than 4 cents. With as many _____ vehicles as the USPS uses, those savings can really add up.

FIVE DAY MAIL DELIVERY?

The USPS currently delivers mail Mondays through Saturdays. Looking for ways to cut USPS _____, some people think ending Saturday mail delivery would be a good _____.

USPS vice president of Sustainability, Sam Pulcrano, said “_____ one day of street delivery will reduce our delivery vehicle use, transport fuel use and also some facility energy use.”

Pulcrano says, “The Postal Service’s carbon footprint would be reduced by 315,000 to 500,000 thousand metric tons of greenhouse gases a year. For perspective, that would _____ approximately 60,000 to 95,000 gasoline-powered passenger cars.”

Do the math to figure out where each piece of mail belongs. Draw a line from each letter to the correct house number.

In some parts of the country, mail is delivered by bicycle.

How many differences can you find between these two mail carriers?

Let's Talk!

Is it a good idea to cut mail delivery by one day a week? Discuss it with classmates and your parents. Make a list of “pros” and “cons” to support your opinion.

Fitness Delivery

Mail carriers often walk miles delivering the mail.

Take a hike around your neighborhood today.

Make sure you stay on the sidewalk.

1. Begin with a brisk walk.

2. After you come to the first mailbox, skip to the next one.

3. At the second mailbox, hop on one leg until you come to the next driveway.

4. Keep walking until you come to a house with a fence. Jump in the air. Now repeat the sequence!

Creator of chewing gum had historical boss

The origin of chewing gum goes all the way back to 50 A.D., when the Greeks chewed mastiche. This was a resin that came from the Mastic tree.

The Mayan Indians of Central America chewed a natural gum called chicle that they derived from trees. American Indians chewed a natural gum-like resin that came from the bark of spruce trees, and they introduced this spruce gum to North American settlers.

In 1869, New York resident Thomas Adams was hired by a Mexican exile named Antonio to develop a new form of rubber that contained chicle, since chicle was plentiful in Mexico. Antonio thought that Adams could make synthetic rubber tires out of the new material. Adams tried to use it to make things like toys, masks, rain boots and bicycle tires; even though he failed in every attempt, he still became a huge success.

One day he decided to chew a piece of the chicle, and then he added flavoring to it. In the process, he created the modern chewing gum. Soon after, he began selling pieces of his gum for a penny each and then he patented the machine that made it.

RED, WHITE & TRUE MYSTERIES™

by Paul Niemann

There are a few other pieces of “gum trivia” that are worth mentioning:

- The very first patent issued for chewing gum went to a dentist named William Semple in 1869, the same year that Adams created his chewing gum. Maybe Semple was the original fifth dentist – you know, the one who didn’t recommend Trident to his patients???

- The first bubble gum was created by Frank Fleer in 1906. If that names sounds familiar, it’s because his company makes the Fleer trading cards.

- A Fleer employee named Walter Diemer made bubble gum pink because pink was the only color that he had left.

And if you just can’t get enough of this gum trivia, here’s one more:

- The largest bubble ever blown was 23 inches in diameter, according to the Guinness Book of World Records. What ever happened to Thomas Adams’ boss, the Mexican exile named Antonio?

Before he moved to New York, Antonio served as a general in the Mexican army; in fact, he was also a former president of Mexico. There was something else for which he is remembered. You know him by his first name, but history knows him by his last name – Santa Anna, as in Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna. He was the general who led the attack on the Alamo!

Thomas Adams’ company went on to merge with the nation’s six other largest chewing gum makers, building a monopoly in the process. Today the company is known as Cadbury Adams, which is a division of Cadbury Schweppes. What happened to Adams’ chicle gum? Did he give his brand of gum a name back then?

It turns out that he did name it. The name of Thomas Adams’ gum, which he began making way back in 1869, is “Chiclets.”

They should mention this kind of stuff in the history books.

Jeff Burton has two top-10 finishes this season, staying competitive amid the need for improvement. (John Clark/NASCAR This Week photo)

Burton’s comeback trail

So far for Jeff Burton, the season has been “just OK.” Burton collected top-10 finishes in four of the final Sprint Cup races of 2011 and expected more than what the current season has yielded to date.

Burton, 44, has failed to make the Chase in two of the past three seasons. The most recent of his 21 victories at NASCAR’s premier level occurred on Oct. 11, 2008, at Charlotte Motor Speedway. That was 119 races ago.

The South Boston, Va., native admitted, “We have certainly not had the start we wanted to have.

“We set out to change a lot of stuff, and we’ve seen some improvement in some areas, and in others we haven’t. ... The day I don’t think I can be competitive, I promise you, I will leave. I’ve never gotten into a race car to get a check. I got every dollar I could get while I was driving it, but I didn’t want to get in it to get the dollar. I got in it because I wanted to get the trophy.”

Burton is in decent position to make a run at the Chase. Entering this weekend’s Samsung Mobile 500, he ranks 15th in the point standings. He already has a fifth-place finish in the Daytona 500 and a sixth in the Auto Club 400 (Fontana, Calif.).

“I have been through this before in my career where I wasn’t successful, but we got back to it, and I believe we will get back to it this time,” Burton said. “It will be difficult. There are some things I’ve got to change and some things that have to change around me.

“We’ve had a few shots, and at this point last year we weren’t even close to seeing it. We have seen some improvements but not at the level we need to.”

Burton won six races in 1999, then driving a Ford for Jack Roush. Now he is in his eighth full season driving one of Richard Childress’s Chevys. He once finished in the top five in points four years in a row with Roush (1997-2000). His best showing with Childress to date was a sixth in 2008.

Texas Motor Speedway, coincidentally, was the site of Burton’s first Cup victory on April 6, 1997.

Go nuts for almonds

Of all the things to love about almonds, this one should really get your heart pumping: Just a handful of almonds a day could help maintain healthy cholesterol levels. That’s good news for just about everyone, as cardiovascular disease holds its spot as the leading cause of death among men and women in the U.S. Research shows that a diet high in heart-healthy foods like almonds can reduce cholesterol levels as much as statin drugs like lovastatin and mevastatin.

Almonds also are one of the richest sources of vitamin E, a powerful antioxidant that helps to reduce the risk of cancer and heart disease. A study published in the June 2005 Journal of Nutrition showed that consuming whole almonds, including the skin, doubles the antioxidant intake.

Just 1 ounce (22 almonds) packs more protein than an egg and more than 3 grams of dietary fiber. This same portion of almonds provides about 160 calories and the high protein content staves off hunger. Almonds also are a rich source of riboflavin, magnesium, manganese and copper.

Shelled almonds may be whole, sliced or slivered with skin on, or blanched with the skin removed. Look for dry-roasted almonds that contain no additional ingredients like sugar or preservatives. Store them in a tightly sealed container in a cool, dry place to prevent them from going rancid and absorbing odors of other foods. Almonds will last several months in the refrigerator and up to a year frozen.

This heart-healthy recipe for Savory Almond and Cheese Straws makes an excellent snack and is a great way to incorporate almonds into your diet.

SAVORY ALMOND AND CHEESE STRAWS

- 1 pound puff pastry dough
- 1 egg, beaten with 1 teaspoon water
- 3/4 cup grated dry cheese, such as Parmesan or aged Gouda
- 3/4 cup almonds, chopped
- Flour for dusting

1. Thaw pastry overnight in refrigerator or 40 minutes at room temperature. Unfold pastry sheets on a lightly floured surface. With the shorter side facing you, roll out each sheet to 12 by 12 inches. Cut each sheet in half, lengthwise.

2. Brush dough with egg mix and sprinkle with an even coating of cheese and almonds.

With a rolling pin, lightly press the mixture into the dough. Cut each half crosswise into 3/4-inch strips. Place on parchment-lined baking sheets and refrigerate for 30 minutes before baking.

3. Bake at 400 F, 9 to 10 minutes, or until light brown and crisp. Makes about 96 straws.

HAPPY TAILS

Special smile wins a couple’s hearts

Ricki Birdsill and her husband had wanted a dog for years, but it was simply a passing thought. Then one day, they got serious and began looking at Petfinder.com, and their slight interest turned into a passion to find the right pup.

Originally the Santa Cruz, Calif., couple was interested in adopting a pit bull, but their homeowners’ insurance company nixed that. “We were crushed,” Birdsill says, but they shifted gears and the very next day, her husband emailed her a link to a particular dog. “Her face and smile were to die for!”

“We contacted the shelter only to be told that she had been taken off the adoptable list due to what was considered an aggressive interaction with a shelter employee,” Birdsill says. The dog had frozen and backed up when the employee entered her kennel with a mop and a hose to clean. “It sounded like fear to us!”

Once again, the couple was crushed. “We knew not being ‘adoptable’ most likely meant euthanasia for this smiley pup,” she says.

“My very persistent husband decided to try to convince them to let us meet her. He did, and they did, and we drove an hour-and-a-half just to see if maybe she was the one.”

She was. “It has been six months, and Kaia couldn’t possibly be more a part of the family. We are in love!” her “mom” says. “She is a world-class cuddler, loves a good belly rub, and sleeps on our bed. (We told ourselves that wouldn’t happen. Her puppy-dog eyes told us differently.) And as for her aggression, well, she may ‘aggressively’ lick your face! Otherwise she hasn’t met a person or dog that she hasn’t wanted to befriend.”

Kaia is one lucky dog that the Birdsills saw something in her photo that gave her a second chance.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- You can start calling Ashton Kutcher the multi-million dollar man! Word is he'll be back next season on "Two And a Half Men" for $1 million an episode. But before he starts shooting his second season, he'll start shooting "Jobs," the Steve Jobs biopic about the late Apple tycoon. Looking at pictures of Jobs from his youth reveals he and Ashton could be twins. Job's former partner at Apple, Steve Wozniak, a former "Dancing With the Stars" contestant, has given his blessing and says, "Steve would have approved of Ashton playing him."

Ashton Kutcher

Multiple Oscar-winning director Clint Eastwood is headed back to acting via the upcoming baseball pic "Trouble With the Curve," filming in Atlanta, hometown of the Braves. But have no fear, Clint still is in control -- he's producing and his partner, Robert Lorenz, is directing. They've rounded up a first-rate cast with Justin Timberlake, Amy Adams, Matthew Lillard, John Goodman and Scott Eastwood. Yes, Scott is Clint's son (with former flight attendant Jacelyn Reeves) and had roles in

"Gran Torino," "Invictus" and the January 2013 release of "Texas Chainsaw Massacre 3D". And here's an update on Clint's "A Star Is Born" with Beyonce. Will Fetters, who wrote the screenplay, admitted he based the role that Tom Cruise may end up playing on Nirvana lead singer Kurt Cobain, who met a tragic, premature end.

"The Help" Oscar-winner Octavia Spencer is trapped on a train full of travelers struggling to co-exist in a world covered in ice and snow in "Snow Piercer." Her fellow passengers are "Captain America" Chris Evans, "Man on a Ledge" co-star Jamie Bell, Oscar-winner Tilda Swinton ("Michael Clayton") and two-time Oscar nominee John Hurt.

Carol Burnett celebrates her 79th birthday on April 26. Seems like we met only yesterday when I was 11 and she was 26 and starring at The Phoenix Theatre in "Once Upon a Mattress," later to move to Broadway, while moonlighting on "The Garry Moore Show." Her variety show, "The Carol Burnett Show," ran for 11 years on CBS. Carol maintains the networks couldn't afford to produce a show like hers today, which is one of the reasons she hasn't return to weekly television.

Outside of a few guest shots on TV shows and voice-overs in two animated films, "Horton Hears a Who" ('08) and "The Secret World of Arrietty" this year, she stays close to home with Brian Miller, her husband of 10 years. He's a drummer and contractor for the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra, and 23 years younger than she. Oh Carol, always a trendsetter ... you put the "coucou" in cougar before it was even a TV series!

as a guide for construction, or simply write "START" at the top and "FINISH" at the bottom of the game board. To create a path for the game, sketch a route on the board with a pen from "START" to "FINISH."

3. Arrange different cut pieces of bendable straw lengths on the game board using the drawing as a guide. Include several dead ends along the way for a challenging course, and leave ample space for the size of the bead you choose to roll through the course. When you are satisfied with your design, glue the straw segments in place.

Let dry.
4. To play, set a bead at "START," snap the case closed and let it roll. For an extra challenge, time the contestants with a stopwatch. When you really get the hang of it, try going through the maze without looking, using verbal cues from siblings, or Mom and Dad.
Extra idea: Construct the game with a tiny bead that goes through the bendable straws instead of around them.

Strange BUT TRUE

by Samantha Weaver

It was British doctor and author Alec Bourne who made the following sage observation: "It is possible to store the mind with a million facts and still be entirely uneducated."

In 2007, a world record was set off the coast of Brazil when a single wave was caught by 84 surfers.

Have you ever heard of a book called "Never Again" by Doug Nufur? Probably not -- it's not on any bestseller lists and hasn't been reviewed by any notable critics. It's quite possibly unique in literary history, however; in its entire 192 pages, not a single word -- even basic words such as a, an, the, of and for -- is used twice.

The Twist dance craze in the 1960s changed the culture in America and spread around the world. Most people don't realize, though, that the song "The Twist," which started the fad, wasn't originally sung by Chubby Checker, though he was the one who sent the single up the charts and has since been irrevocably associated with the dance. The song was originally written and performed by an R&B singer named Hank Ballard. A deejay in Baltimore saw teenagers dancing to Ballard's song and called Dick Clark, host of "American Bandstand." Clark loved it and invited Ballard to perform the song on the show, but it didn't work out. Instead, Clark found someone else to perform the song: Ernest Evans, who changed his name to Chubby Checker. It made his career.

Thought for the Day: "It takes only one drink to get me drunk. The trouble is, I can't remember if it's the thirteenth or the fourteenth." -- George Burns

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.
Differences: 1. Bow is moved. 2. Belt is different. 3. Lamppost is missing. 4. Eyeglasses are missing. 5. Shirt is different. 6. Hose is missing.

Who invented baseball?

Baseball was invented in 1845 by a man named Alexander Cartwright. While living in New York, Cartwright played a popular game called "town ball." It was a simple game with informal rules. Cartwright drafted and adopted the first formalized set of rules for the game. These rules became the foundation for the modern game of baseball. Among the rules established by Cartwright were the way teams record an out, the diamond shaped layout of the field, and the designation of fair and foul areas.
