Stansbury residents sound off on future

by Allen Lang

Stansbury Park residents weighed in with a rousing yes, a high-no, and a grocery store. The idea of incorporating was not so clear-cut, with many people in favor of the idea, while others voiced concerns about turning their rural community into just another suburb.

A little more than 200 concerned citizens turned out to discuss the future of Stansbury Park at a community meeting hosted by Tooele County Commissioners at Rose Springs Elementary Thursday. Commissioner Matt Lawrence said he hopes the meeting was the first of several economic and community development meetings to be held focusing on the sparse neighborhood.

“We are looking at the shaping of a community here,” Lawrence said. “We want to allow Stansbury residents to voice their ideas, concerns and vision of what they want the community to become.”

As Economic Development Coordinator for Tooele County, Lawrence said he and Commissioner Donny Rockbell and Colleen Johnson, as well as Mike Johnsen, Tooele County School District origanizer, planned to “advertise” all of our time because tonight.

In order to keep the discussion civil, Lawrence read names from a strip-up, and anyone with more than two minutes to voice their concerns would have to return to the community.

He noted that the proposal to build a cemetery and a high school in Stansbury is in the community’s own approval program.

Other concerns voiced were the grocery store, post office, police force, and where services could be made available.

“We want to be a community in control of our community,” Lawrence said, as Randall Jones, a member of the Stansbury Park Service Agency Board. He said he hopes to see Stansbury develop a downtown area, a city hall and village square, making the neighborhood a town “not a strip of buildings on the way to somewhere else.”

But opinions differed as to how such a community could be established.

Many favored the idea of incorporating as a city, but Lawrence noted this would be difficult without a strong economic base. He noted, economic incentive packages for businesses are available through the county and the state.

Jones reiterated his initial idea of combining towns with Tooele School District to turn a proposed Stansbury Park high school into a community center with library services and recreation facilities open to the public.

As it wore on and everyone had a chance to voice their opinions, the crowd thinned. Several concerns emerged. While Stansbury Park residents would like to see additional economic development, they hope to preserve the park-like setting of the community.

When the men will face trial is still in question, according to Swartzfager.

Johnsen said. “If you say a school receives a ‘did not pass’ assessment for two consecutive years, then you are in an improvement plan that forces the school district to redirect resources to that school, at the cost of those that are currently meeting the standards.”

“Don’t get your money any more money than you used to get,” Johnsen said. “Just keep the standards.”

“Only schools and school districts that receive Title I money from the federal government are officially sanctioned in the event that they are placed on an improvement plan. Title I money is based on the number of low-income students at a district education. Tooele County received just over $70,000 in Title I money in 2004. Any federal Elementary or Title I school, if it fails to meet its adequate yearly progress goals, must ask the school district will need to take money away from other Tooele County Title I schools in order to provide those schools in Title I schools the money it needs to keep schools that are passing in year annually assessed.”

Despite the high impact that a school can have on an entire district’s funding plan, critics argue that yearly assessments can be skewed by poor test results from a few schools.

“There’s a lot of unfair press to public schools because of student poverty in Utah that causes children to perform poorly,” said Mark McMillen, director of public relations for the UEA. “We hope our parents understand this is not the fault of the schools.”

“Terry, the state of the art in the standards,” said McMillen. “We feel today?”

Family nurtures tree at G-ville reservoir for dad gone too soon

by Mary Ruth Hammond

It’s not too tall right now — the tree planted in memory of Kenny Butler, a 37-year-old Grantsville father who died May 2, but someday the tree will reach high above the heads of those who go “to the spot where his spirit went to heaven” to remember the dark-haired man who loved others with all his heart.

The tree will someday provide shade and comfort to Kenny’s three children: Michael, 15; Ashley, 13, and Aaron, 11. It brought us a chance to hear from the heart of his dad. Roger and his ex-wife, Eva Max. And it will help his brothers and sisters: Eva Kay, David, and Virginia to remember the good times they had together as a family.

Kenny, who had moved to Texas just a few months before his death and was back in Grantsville for a visit when his life ended early in June of this year, had worked for Stanlit Salt for approximately 15 years. He had also worked for Supreme Encroaching, earned by a cousin, Randy But, and in Texas, Kenny was working for a cement company.

Life hadn’t been easy for Kenny. After his parents’ marriage fell apart, he and his siblings were raised by their dad, Roger, Martha Butler, also stepped in to ensure they grew up properly, get their homework done, and that the 50-cent candy bars they were supposed to buy were “just candies, not movie snax without Aunt Martha help,” said Kenny’s dad. Roger Butler, and the Tooele Transcript-Denial today. "She was a great help to all.

Even though they moved out of state, Roger said they always loved having children and never failed to send them cards and presents for special occasions.

But with all the ups and downs Kenny experienced in his life, he didn’t graduate with his class. "The best time Kenny experienced in his life, he didn’t graduate with his class because of the ups and downs," Roger said. "This is what he wanted, and that’s what he got.

Kenny’s goal in his son’s life was making that Michael, Ashley and Aaron were happy and safe.

"Watching his children grow, teaching them the joys of fishing, hunting, camping, and sharing with them a father’s love, was Kenny’s greatest joy," Roger said.

As a young boy, Kenny had been a great neighborhood baseball pitcher, according to his dad, even pitched a no-hitter during the WIBA World Series in 1986.

"Kenny’s daughter, Ashley, is carrying on her father’s baseball legacy," Roger said. Kenny was also artistic and enjoyed making wooden wedding wheels, carving elk and other wildlife figurines out of metal.

"He also made a metal fire fighter’s figure for a maihaher and a firefighter hose holder," Roger said.

In addition to his children, Kenny was especially close to his dad. Throughout his life, including the last three weeks of his life, Kenny would go to the Grantsville reservoir to make a Dutch oven dinner.

"Kenny made any kind of Dutch oven you can imagine, including cakes and cobblers," said Roger.

Roger remembered how he could see Kenny making a breakfast during the last three weeks of his life and saying, Dad, come on up to the outdoor kitchen, I’ve got a Dutch oven breakfast, including eggs and sausages cooking for me.

After spending two or three hours camping in the last few months and the last two months before he died, Kenny was ready to arrive in Texas. He had made arrangements to come back to Grantsville in June to take his three children to his home for the first time.

The day before his death, Kenny and a friend took a hike in the wilderness to shoot jack rabbits and coyotes. Kenny said when his son came home that night, he seemed happy. In fact, someone mentioned that during that last few days on earth, Kenny was laughing and having a great time.

"One of his sister’s friends mentioned that it looked like he was happy, and on Tuesday, June 6, the family wrote a birthday message to him. "We love you very much, and we are all very proud of you!

The family has planted a handmade fence around the tree — hoping that no one will drive over it or destroy it in any other way. (See Sept. 5, which would have been Kenny’s 38th birthday.)

Family members and friends gathered on a board-placed near the fence. Roger is hoping to soon have a cement plaque near the tree so that everyone will understand its significance.

It’s just a small tree right now but someday the tree planted in memory of Kenny Butler will grow steady and tall. It will provide shade and comfort to a family that is proving for a father, son, brother, uncle and nephews who had a tough, but happy life. The tree planted near the Grantsville reservoir by Kenny’s loved ones will be a living reminder of a young dad who died way too soon.

We love you very much, and we are all very proud of you!
President Bush must call a stop to the entire fraudulent effort to squeeze endless donations out of the American people.

The President has time and again discovered that, when he steps into the public sphere to promulgate a cause, he can talk himself into the country that the money is going to be used to help disaster victims. The public is so inundated with images of disaster victims, especially since 9/11, that it is easy to mislead the American people into believing their donation will arrive at a victim in time of need. A large percentage of the money raised is, in fact, spent on administrative costs.

The American people should have the right to know how their hard earned money is being spent. The President must give us a list of the organizations that he is funding and how much he is giving each of them. If he is not willing to do this, then the disaster relief efforts should be taken over by the United Nations to make sure that our tax dollars are being used properly.

The President should also be involved in the planning of the relief effort. He should have a say in the direction of the relief effort and how the money is being spent. The President should also be able to communicate directly with the people who are in need of help.

The American people deserve to know how their hard earned money is being spent. The President must give us a list of the organizations that he is funding and how much he is giving each of them. If he is not willing to do this, then the disaster relief efforts should be taken over by the United Nations to make sure that our tax dollars are being used properly.

personal generosity and innate willingness of private citizens to help. How many might say, “I already gave — to the IRA. Enough is enough.” While many people in Louisiana did the best they could and prepared as well as they knew how, many could probably have done better for themselves if they had planned. People should strive to have three days of food and water and a change of clothing on hand either to shelter in place or to evacuate if necessary. For basic survival, this doesn’t amount to much but it would sustain them during the initial period of an emergency. An article in the Sept. 8 edition of the Transcript Bulletin described a family of horneaters who prepared themselves and consequently fared better than many others. Concurrently, September is National Preparedness Month, sponsored by the American Red Cross and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security. The goal is to increase public awareness about the importance of preparing for emergencies and to encourage individuals to take action. Many Internet websites have useful information about immediate and long-term preparedness. One place to begin is www.ready.gov. Also, typing the words “72 hour kits” into a Web search engine will generate many sources. As has so often occurred in the wake of tragedy and disaster, Hurricane Katrina has brought on the best in American people. It may also provide a lesson for those who are in a position to assist others now to better provide for themselves for the future. Helen Aldridge Grantsville

Asbestos bill rotten
Editor: How ironic that at a time when politicians in Washington are stripping even the basic life support for our military being advanced by the brave men and women serving in Iraq, our legislators pass a bill that would deny millions of veterans compensation. It is just plain rotten. It was a mistake and the course of action I had taken was wrong. I want to say I am sorry to anyone who has been affected by this. I have since learned that the correct action I had taken was wrong. I want to say I will accept my apologies and I am in your hearts to forgive me.

I am writing this letter in support of Dave McCall for city council. The dedication and caring for Tooele has been demonstrated a number of times with his work on the Tooele City Community Action Program, Together with Youth, Tooele EMER, Drug Awareness Chairman, and his most recent project as Veteran Coordinator for the Tooele BPOE in building the Veterans Memorial in the park on Main and Vine streets. I encourage everyone to visit this beautiful memorial to our veterans. It took over these years of planning and caring money and a lot of time and dedication with Monday night dinners, golf scrambles, trap shoots, and the biggest fundraiser organizing the bricks purchased to be placed at the memorial. Each brick is inscribed with a veteran name, branch of service, and years of service, which was a major undertaking. It took countless hours preparing the certificates of purchase and the ordering of these bricks. The current order of of approximately 300 bricks should be in place by the first part of October bringing the total to 700 bricks. I am very sorry.

Talent is what sustains a team. There is little else to peak levels. Competition into leaders. The highly competitive individual sometimes even more. A strong competitive drive, a physical talent that has as much impact as one’s heart, will and talent. There is little else to achieve.

The Lady Mustangs cruised to a decisive victory over the Miners on Thursday in the league opener at Dugway. Bev Rolfe and Ben Lomond haven’t exactly been very comfortable with its 3-1 region 18 volleyball crowns.

The Panthers could only muster a Jesse Ence field goal early in the third period to grab the lead and the Miners knotted up.

The stingy Buff defense held the Panthers scoreless for the balance of the third and they took advantage of the opportunity.

Regardless, Grantsville is now set to wipe the slate clean and move on to the champion Bear River Bears at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Dugway.

The Panthers broke open a close contest with a huge boost with a 17-yard bolt by Mason Lark to open the third quarter scoring. Lark also established the Utah state record for PAT’s when he hit all three of them in the third quarter to take the lead for good. Mikesell hooked up in the second quarter and the Miners’ lineb...
