Herbert’s stand on prison relocation changed?

by Tim Gillie

Staff Writer

Economic development concerns were at the forefront of Gary Herbert’s call to the Legislature in 2013 to move the Utah State Prison.

But at his monthly news conference last week, Herbert instead put the aging facility and prison reform at the center of the discussions to build a new prison elsewhere — as he did in Draper.

The change in emphasis is not a change in position, according to Herbert’s spokesperson.

In his 2013 state of the state address, the governor declared that the land upon which the prison currently resides must be made available for continued growth of the state’s technology, tourism, and manufacturing sectors, as well as for parks and land conservation.

“It is our obligation to manage the natural resources of the state not just for the benefit of today, but for future generations,” Herbert said.

A Tooele man was dead after the Ford Mustang he was driving struck a parked car on South Tooele Boulevard on Monday morning, police said.

Brian Bell, 62, died of injuries sustained in the crash, according to Tooele City Police. Bell’s red Ford Mustang was traveling northbound in the area of 435 S. Tooele Boulevard around 2:30 a.m. when he struck a black Volkswagen parked on the shoulder of the road.

After the impact, the Mustang hit the curb and rolled all the way to the road, police said.

A teenager, whose name was not released, was slain in the car with Bell and was transported to Mountain West Medical Center in critical condition, police said. Bell was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident, according to Tooele City Police. SEE HERBERT PAGE A10

Tooele City OKs $18.9M budget for 2016

by Damian Ponset

Staff Writer

The Tooele City Council voted unanimously last week to approve a proposed $18.9 million budget for the 2016 fiscal year.

The unanimous vote came Wednesday evening after a brief public hearing failed to garner any additional public comments on the proposed budget, which Tooele City Mayor Patrick Dunlay presented to the city council two weeks ago.

The approved budget represents an increase from the current year of $6.2 million over the $12.7 million budget for the 2015 fiscal year. According to Dunlay, $210.6 million of that increase can be attributed to a climb in employee compensation that will add pay raises and employee benchmarked rates and 401(k) contributions for city employees.

The 2015 general fund budget also includes a $2.1 million increase in non-departmental expenses, which Tooele City...

Staffing company sees jump in placed workers

A Little over one year ago, the business office of Intermountain Staffing in Tooele City had six employees. Today, the staffing company has 34 employees.

“Today the staffing company has a workforce of 50 to 70 people depending on the time of year,” said Cathy Stromberg, branch manager for Intermountain Staffing’s Tooele office.

In 2009, near the end of the recession, Intermountain Staffing reported that its Tooele office was only open on Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. To meet the demand, the company began having the office open Monday through Friday.

“Due to the economy, we were in the process of merging business owners and moving to offices with existing companies,” said Stromberg.

Intermountain Staffing specializes in providing a workforce for light industrial, entry-level retail, non-clinical hospital, and entry-level clerical positions.

Stromberg said the company has received a substantial increase in demand for entry-level retail positions. Intermountain Staffing is hiring for “Temp-to-Hire” jobs.

“Temp-to-Hire” jobs give both the employee and the employer the opportunity to find out if they are a good match for each other.

Among the clients of Intermountain Staffing in Tooele County are Precision Building Systems, Ocean Start International, and Precision Building Systems.

With more job seekers joining the ranks, the company continues to place employees outside the county. Intermountain Staffing will try to help match workers with jobs even after they are out of state.

“Reliable transportation is essential if you want to work outside of the county,” said Stromberg.

The job market in Tooele County is growing, according to Stromberg.

“The job market is growing and staffing is needed to support a lot of small businesses that would like to work with employees and create new small businesses are struggling to find workers,” said Stromberg.

The company is looking for help outside of North Salt Lake, Intermountain Staffing has been successfully staffing for 46 years. Stromberg said she can trace the Tooele office back to 1959.

Intermountain has offices in six states with 18 locations in Utah.

People interested in working for the company can apply online at www.intermountainstaffing.com. The Tooele Office is located at 7 S. Main Street.

“We are always looking for temp workers,” said Stromberg.

Preposterous spending
The lack of humility at spending taxes’ money is astronomical. Recent, the country road department has been using “repairing” more county roads with their chip seal process. If you have never had to live with this in your neighborhood, consider yourself lucky. This is just a horrible way to maintain roads, but when it is being applied to a new road to a new subdivision, it gets really ugly.

Wildfires are a fact of life in Tooele County. So too is lightning. But with fire risk is quickly increasing,” said L.J. Brown, West Desert District Manager, BLM. “With rising temperatures, the grass and brush in the West Desert are dryer than ever. The fire season is approaching fast, and area canyons and the West Desert filled with fire-caused ones are.

And in today’s edition, there’s a story about the Bureau of Land Management’s annual report. BLM uses fire prevention and management efforts to mitigate against forest fires. The BLM issued a fire prevention order last month that prohibits fires, explosives, and discharges of incendiary devices and other those that spark are allowed. Steel core, jagged or tipped ammunition is also banned on public land from June 20-Sept. 30.

“Wildfire season starts early and goes on for months,” warned a land management spokesperson. “If you enter public land, make sure not to bring matches, cigarettes, or anything that could start a fire.”

Jeb Bush: a man in the political scrap of his life

T he last time Jeb Bush ran for office, it was 13 years ago. Back then, he was running for the Illinois state Senate. No one had heard of him at the time, but he was the returning party, and would’ve lost if he didn’t. It was before he became the famous Bush, he was just L.B. Bush and his brother baracked him to the presidency.

Today, he is running for president, and he is running hard. He has an inexorable grind down all the other candidates. He has a message, and he’s making sure that everyone knows about it.

The Stanley Cup stirs great memories of old

You don’t have to be a Chicago native to appreciate the Stanley Cup. For many people, the Stanley Cup is a symbol of a team’s hard work and dedication, and it represents the culmination of a season’s efforts.

The Stanley Cup is a symbol of the team that has earned it. It is a symbol of triumph, of victory, and of the hard work that goes into achieving success. And for many people, it is a symbol of their memories of the game.

The Stanley Cup is a symbol of the players who have worn it. It is a symbol of their love for the game, their dedication to their team, and their commitment to each other.

The Stanley Cup is a symbol of the fans who have cheered for their teams. It is a symbol of their support, their passion, and their love for the game.

The Stanley Cup is a symbol of the city of Chicago. It is a symbol of the spirit of the city, of the hard work and dedication that goes into achieving success, and of the importance of the game to the city.

MATTERS OF FAITH

God is aware of our need to feel safe, secure

First of all, God makes it clear in the Old Testament that He does not forsake His faithful ones, and He expounds on that security. Most desire it in one word, “security.” Many people choose faith in Christ as Savior. If you are not sure what it means, please call me. I am easy to talk to, and I will be glad to share with you what God—He who made the Bible—has to say about these issues.

“Do not fear,” He says. “For I am with you. I will never leave you, nor forsake you.” He will never forsake you. God wants you to know that He will always be with you, and that He will never leave you.

Second of all, in the New Testament, when He speaks to those who have put their faith in Christ as Savior, He says that He will never leave you, nor forsake you. In Greek, the word “dwell” means “to be ever present.” In 2 Corinthians 4:2, “we speak, not in the manner of men, but in the Holy Spirit.”

So often I have heard someone say, “I just don’t feel like the Lord is close to me right now.” When I hear that, or in those times when I have felt that way, I need to reassure those of us who dwell within those who have put their faith in Christ as Savior. If you analyze your feelings, God never deserted you, and He will never, ever, move away from you.

In Matthew 28:20 Jesus said that He would “return” to us, and He is speaking to those who have put their faith in Him as Savior. If I have a complaint, it is that God does not remind us often enough of what He has done for us.

To be honest, it may not be encouraging that others feel the same way you do about these things, because knowing that they will, can be, or have been, broken. But let us be sure that they will, can be, or have been.

tions in community planning, will work on the land use plan. InterPlan, a transportation consulting firm, will address the transportation elements of the general plan. The plan update documents are based in Salt Lake City.

The land use element of the general plan takes a look at projected population growth, housing density, and appropriate zoning and permitted land use and resource use for residential, commercial, agricultural, and other purposes, according to Gehring.

The transportation part of the general plan includes roads, highways, and trails for walking and biking, he said.

The general plan is a gide-o-line. The plan does not carry the force of law, but the plan directs the adoption of the zoning map for areas of the unincorporated county, according to Gehring.

The July 6 meeting will include a discussion of land use and transportation issues facilitated by the county’s consultants.

The public meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 8, at the county building at 47 S. Main, Tooele.

The Tooele Valley is expected to increase its population in the coming years, adding more people and homes.

The current general plan can be found at www.ldi-

The public meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, July 8, in the auditorium of the Tooele County building at 47 S. Main, Tooele.

Johnson suffers another agonizing loss in a major

by Darren Vaughan

Mark of us remember the iconic opening of ABC’s “Wide World of Sports.” Iconic, but you know, the one with Jim McKay describing “the joy of vic...” or teeing off Monday morning, rather than raising the trophy him for much of the back nine. Rather than raising the trophy or teeing off Monday morning, Johnson was left to ponder the waiting until he finished at the 17th hole, followed by a missed eagle putt on the 18th that left seemingly gave Johnson the title on a silver platter after an impossible double-bogey on the 17th hole, followed by a missed eagle putt on the 18th that left him with a tenuous one-stroke lead as he signed his scorecard. Johnson, playing in the final group of the day, seemed to sober the title with a brilliant eagle on the par-5 18th to tie for the lead. The last hole that left him with a 2-under par 69. His second shot at very worst, Johnson would need a birdie and a fairly would play an 18-hole playoff on Monday.

The May 6, 2015, edition of “Wide World of Sports” is an iconic moment in sports broadcasting. ABC, led by Jim McKay, aired the first-ever live broadcast of a major tournament, the 1961 U.S. Open at Oakmont Country Club in Pittsburgh. The broadcast featured coverage of the entire tournament, including the final round, which aired on the evening of the 18th hole.

In 2015, the U.S. Open was held at Chambers Bay in University Place, Washington, and was won by Jordan Spieth. However, the tournament was memorable for the way it played out on the final day. Spieth, who was leading by one stroke entering the final round, took a two-stroke lead over the field and held on to win by two strokes.

The tournament was marked by a number of memorable moments, including a hole-in-one by Jordan Spieth on the 10th hole, and a final round where Spieth and Scott Piercy played a three-ball playoff to decide the champion.

The tournament was watched by millions of viewers worldwide, and was widely regarded as one of the greatest U.S. Open finals in history.

The U.S. Open is not just a test of skill and focus, but also a test of nerves and mental fortitude. The pressure of a final round on the final day is immense, and it is often said that the Open is the ultimate test of a golfer’s ability.

Johnson, who has struggled with consistency in recent years, was looking to add to his two other major victories, the 2000 Masters and 2006 Open Championship. However, he was unable to overcome the pressure of the moment and ultimately lost to Spieth.

The U.S. Open is the pinnacle of professional golf, and winning the tournament is considered one of the greatest honors a golfer can achieve. Johnson’s loss was a reminder of the immense pressure and challenges faced by the best players in the world at the highest level of the sport. TOOELE TRANSCRIPT-BULLETIN

Scherzer still celebrating his no-hitter

Scherzer's parents were listening, too. They were proud and excited about what he did, even if they were a little surprised. Scherzer's parents knew he had the talent to achieve such a feat, but they didn't think it was possible.

Scherzer's teammates were also thrilled with his performance. They knew they had a teammate who could do anything on the baseball field, and they were proud to see him achieve such a great feat.

Scherzer's teammates thanked him for his performance, and they said they were looking forward to seeing him do it again. They were confident that he would continue to perform at a high level, and they were excited to see what he would do next.

Scherzer himself was humble about his accomplishment. He said he didn't think he was doing anything special, and he was just doing his job.

But everyone else disagreed. They saw Scherzer as a true baseball star, and they were proud to call him a teammate. They knew they had a special player on their team, and they were looking forward to seeing him achieve even more great things in the future.

finding a more suitable location for the state prison.

“We must make this 730-acre parcel available for the contin- ued growth of our IT industry,” he added. “Sometimes promo- ting economic development means accepting the principle of moving and modernizing the state prison to a new location.”

Herbert’s remarks about pris- on relocation during her state of the state address appeared to be part of his larger effort to move the facility to a new loca- tion.

“I’ve always said if Draper is the best place let’s keep it there,” he said. “If it is not, if there’s a better location than Draper, let’s move it there. That’s my position. Fine, fair, and simple.”

Economic development is just “part of” on the benefits of moving the prison, Herbert said at the news conference.

The motive behind mov- ing the prison ought not to be just the economic development aspects of moving up that hill,” he said. “That may be a second- ary issue, certainly important, but the primary reason is we need a new prison.”

Constrained by the cur- rent prison facilities, the Department of Corrections is not able to do the rehabilitation work that is necessary in today’s society, he said.

Herbert’s current emphasis on convicted justice reform is not a shift from his earlier stand on economic development, accord- ing to Marty Carpenter, spokes- man for the governor.

“I don’t see this as a change in position at all,” Carpenter said. “During 2013, there have been multiple reasons to consid- er relocating the prison. We need to build a new prison because the current facility in Draper is nearing the end of its lifespan and the prison facilities are not designed in a way that is conduc- tive to today’s best rehabilitation practices, to name just two.”

Herbert concurred with a 2014 legislative committee that con- tracted with the University of Utah and the best interests of the state to move the prison facili- ties from their current location in Draper.” But during the press conference he suggested that the Legislature should consider rebuilt the state prison on the current site in Draper.”

“If we cannot do it on site and if we cannot do it all, then it (the state prison) ought to be in a new site,” he said, “and I’m looking to the legislature to give me that rec- ommendation,” Herbert said.

The entire prison relocation process has been consistent with Herbert’s call in 2013 to “get seri- ous about finding a more suit- able location for the prison,” according to Carpenter.

“That does not presuppose there is a better location, just that now is the time to look seri- ously at where the new facility will best serve the population,” Carpenter said. “Among the many factors to be considered is the potential for economic development.” However, he said, “Herbert’s call to do this is especially important for the time being because economic development in the state prison facility is a very critical issue.”

Once upon a time, Henri, a poor farmer, was carrying his wares to market. He was growing so tired of his routine, that he decided to take a new route, a path he had never seen before. On his way, he found a beggar, the man called out, "Henri, you complain, but what makes you so unhappy?"

Henri stopped and looked at the strange man in tattered clothes. "My wife and I are almost starving," he protested, but Colette would not stop speaking. "I have prayed for a house on a hill and a little bit of savings to help me through the hard times, but you have never answered my prayers."

"That's all," the man in robes answered, "Very well, your wish is granted. Go back home and ask your wife, 'Climb the beanstalk and ask for one.'"

Henri was astonished, but Colette insisted, so he climbed back up to the mansion in heaven. When the man in robes answered his knock, Henri said, "Pardon, my Lord, but my wife was unhappy?"

"Yes, Henri, but I would like to be a queen, Henri. Please go ask the Lord for that.

Henri shook his head. "I couldn't ask for such a thing," he protested, but Colette would not stop asking him. So at long last, he climbed the stalk one more time and went to see the Lord.

"Climb the beanstalk to a queen," the Lord practically whimpers.

"What?" the Lord asked, surprised and slightly irritated. "Did you grant my request?

When Henri returned home, he saw his wife staring straight up into the sky, her head turned upward. A line of foreign ministers stood outside the earth's walls, waiting for a visit with the queen.

"What you are?" the Lord asked, surprised.

"I am a queen," Colette said.

"No, I think I'll take the Lord," Colette said. "Please climb the beanstalk again."

Henri was startled, but she kept asking him until he could do nothing but agree to her request. This time when he appeared before the Lord, he looked down at his feet and said, "Colette asks to be the Lord."

When the Lord heard this, he exploded. "You are the Lord!"

"But, I would like to be a queen, Henri. Please go ask the Lord for that."

And with that, Henri and Colette were left with what little they had in the beginning.
