The Tooele man arrested last Friday in the homicide of his mother has been charged in 3rd District Court. Jesus “Jesse” Aragon, 44, has been charged with murder and first-degree felony murder. The motions of the Friday morning homicide at Tooele City was identified by police as 60-year-old Marcella Aragon of Tooele.

The man identified as the suspect, who had been booked into the Tooele County Detention Center on charges of homicide, aggravated arson, and interference with an arrest officer, according to the probable-cause statement. Tooele City police were dispatched to the Marcella Aragon home at 245 E. 600 North around 7:30 a.m. for suspicious circumstances and a welfare check, Turnbow said. The reporting party, who was a family member of the victim, alleged that Jesus "Jesse" Aragon was arrested and booked into jail. He has been charged with first-degree felony murder.

Fire recovery just getting started in Tooele

STEVE HOMER  story

As families displaced by last Tuesday’s fire continue to deal with the aftermath of the destructive blaze, Tooele County Emergency Management director Rocky Whithorne is cautioning eager community volunteers to be patient.

During a meeting between local government and local church and volunteer organizations Thursday afternoon, Whithorne said about one hour’s time he has received a coordinated response to the fire, which damaged 10 residences and up to an additional 16. He reminded the recipients that the fire recovery is both short term and long term, but praised the assistance already shown by residents.

“We appreciate everyone’s ongoing support for the fire that occurred on Van Deusen Road, in particular the trailer park off Coleman,” said Whithorne, who also serves as Tooele City Fire Chief.

Lightning causes several fires in county

STEVE HOMER  story

Four fires were started over the weekend in Tooele County, but none were human-caused, according to a fire official.

A type-2 wildfire by lightning strikes on Bureau of Land Management land near Aragonite around midnight last Friday. The fire expanded to 313 acres overnight but quickly petered out in the morning and was fully contained shortly thereafter, Walden said.

Just days after a six-acre fire burned down 20 homes and damaged an additional eight residences, Tooele City had another fire set by lightning. Walden said that fire started north of Settlement Canyon and grew to more than three acres before it was extinguished by the Tooele City Fire Department.

There was also a small grass fire Friday night by Adobe Rock Products in Strawberry Park, which was caused by a lightning strike, according to North Tooele Fire District public information officer Steve Whitehouse.

The STEM designation is a designation to recognize and promote best practices in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math education. The goal is to prepare students for careers in the workforce and ensure Utah’s continued economic success, according to Marble.

“Parents, students, and communities are using STEM education as a tool to prepare students for college and career readiness for all students,” Marble said.

To earn STEM designation, Overlake Elementary completed a comprehensive digital portfolio of evidence to demonstrate excellence in STEM education, including student project-based learning, teacher and community partnerships and support for teacher professional learning.

In their classrooms, such as the new garden, students are testing learning experiences centered on interesting real-world problems, according to Marble. One example of this is a problem-solving process that the students are following to test, then improve, their own unique television service — BeeTV. By creating the BeeTV service, they will develop a business plan and make a pitch for their idea to local judges.

“Overlake Elementary is a K-8 school in Tooele County School District in Utah,” Fox said. “At Overlake Elementary, we plan a solution, then create that solution, and then test the solution.”

The garden was designed to incorporate science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) education, according to Gowans.

“I, as the student, was given a chance to do this,” said Marc Johnson, a fourth-grade student at Overlake Elementary. “We worked with science teachers and our principal to create this garden, and it went really well.”

“Ultimately, students want to be able to plan for the garden on special occasions, like Water Day,” said Gowans. “For example, we’re working on it through the summer, and it will be a continuous project.”

Although there are new learning opportunities for students, Fox said they also have a need to focus on pathways.

“Working with residents, we have been able to find new ways to achieve the goals of the community,” Fox said. “We have been able to create new pathways that we didn’t think were possible.”

After six years at St. Marguerite, Father Dinsdale heads to Sandy

staff writer

After six years serving the Catholic population in Tooele, Rev. Dom Dinsdale has been called to provide pastoral care in another parish.

His new home will be in Sandy. The new parish will include a church and school, similar to the congregation in Tooele.

“It’s a huge jump,” Dinsdale said. “Tooele is a very small community, but I’ve never been anywhere more than six hours in my life since high school... and I’m getting the itch.”

A priest personnel board comprised of the local bishop, vicar general and a few other priests in the Salt Lake City diocese, made the decision to transfer Dinsdale. Every year, the board reviews all parishes in the state, keeping track of how long each pastor has been there and how many are retiree.

Dinsdale said the priest he replaces in Sandy retired. “The priest has a say, but ultimately it’s the bishop’s decision.”

Dinsdale said, “Really, a priest shouldn’t be in one place too long because it makes it more difficult to move... I’m grateful for my time here and the chance to write in the Transcript Bulletin. That was fun.”

For the past few years, he contributed monthly to the newspaper’s “Matters of Faith” column and also wrote guest opinions that were published in the Open Forum section.

As Dinsdale reflected on his 13 years as a priest, including his six years in Tooele, he said the relationships he’s formed have helped him fulfill his call as a service provider.

“The most fulfilling thing is ministering with others in all settings, whether it’s teaching with the principal at the school or running just about anything,” he said. "Just working with others and having meaningful relationships. That is the kind of model I learned at seminary, and you’re aware; it’s a leadership role, but you work together.”

Dinsdale feels confident he’s leaving the city in good hands. “The new priest, Kenneth Cummings, is very active and involved in the community. Vialpando serves as pastor over a parish in Ogdensburg. He will take over in Tooele after Dinsdale’s last day on July 12.”

Dinsdale said the first few years helped to gain the full-time ministry while he was studying at a Catholic high school. “I grew up in Ogden. I went to a Catholic school and had some priests in my life,” Dinsdale said. “When I left out of high school, I went to Utah State University. I thought about getting into seminary then, but I wasn’t encouraged to get my bachelor’s degree first.”

After double-majoring and graduating in liberal arts and business, Dinsdale still wanted to pursue a ministerial career. He attended a seminary in San Francisco for six years and earned the required equivalent credits to be ordained a priest.

“During that process, you’re just discerning,” he said. “You’re discerning whether it’s your calling and they’re discerning whether you should still pursue that calling. It’s a no for or against you. It’s a great personal thing... you’re really focused on what it means to be a Christian, and you get paid to do it.”

“The only drawback is you’re a little older. There are a few different lifestyles. You take a year of celibacy. That’s one of the big things you have to discern — whether you can forgive having a spouse and fam- ily.”

After graduating from seminary, Dinsdale served five years as an associate priest in Midvale and Park City. In 2000, he became priest of St. Patrick Church in Salt Lake City. Tooele seemed calm and quiet compared to serving the multicultural congregations in Salt Lake, he said.

But, the transition has been a smooth one. “Dom always says you miss New Mexico and a Spanish-speaking community mostly from Mexico. And generally speaking, the congregation is a little color.”

There are a lot of retired people, people who are homebound or in rest homes.”

The congregation is family and will probably be similar to Tooele, he said. “Congregation Susan Cummings and Dom Dinsdale will serve.”

As Dinsdale was young and clear, and had a lot of new ideas and was very vocal,” she said. “He’s been busy... We have a very colorful parish and it’s a very active Hispanic group (in Tooele) and you speak Spanish, so that has helped bring our Spanish community together.”

Cummings noted Dom Dinsdale does contrat, he goes to Dugway once a week and holds masses. Even though he has his ministry, he also runs and rides a bike.

“From our standpoint, he’s been a very good friend to my husband and everybody in the parish,” she said. “He’s not just our pastor or minister; he’s our friend. You can’t say that about every priest you work with. It’s very unique that we have that relationship. He’s a very friendly individual and very, very intelligent.”

Parishioners will face some adjustment when Vialpando arrives Aug. 1, because every priest has a different leadership style. However, the fact Vialpando is a Tooele native should help the transition, Cummings added. JHens@deseretnews.com

‘War on police’ brings the 1970s era back

In the past two years, the “war on police” has gone from a fringe靠谱 notion to a widespread concern, with police officers killed in targeted attacks in Dallas, Baton Rouge and Dallas.

The country hasn't seen any thing like it since the late 1960s, when a spate of local outbreaks of civil unrest, the assassinations of Martin Luther King Jr. and Robert Kennedy, and a sense of rising political frustration and cultural dislocation.

The recent unrest in Ferguson and Baltimore have been especially disturbing, showing how the trust between police and the community has eroded and how reform is needed.

They became a symbol of their passion for police reform. They demonstrated their passion for police reform. They demonstrated their passion for police reform.

Cutting crops quickly moved from the Black Panther newspaper’s pages to the front of the Black Panther newspaper in the San Francisco Bay Area with an actual editorial. The Black Panther newspaper was a national leader in the civil rights movement, a massive force in the struggle for civil rights, and a key player in the Black Power movement.

From 1967 to 1973, the BLA participated in more than 250 acts of violence, including 17 bombings, 15 bank robberies, 12 bank hold-ups, 11 mail thefts, and 7 bank burglaries.

While fire crews worked throughout the night to prevent the blaze from spreading, another match sparked a fire at the community center.

Trump campaign foolishly denies plagiarism

I t’s not only ridiculous, it’s stupid, and the Trump campaign can’t, doesn’t and shouldn’t do it. There can be no other way to describe how, in face, telling him he didn’t have any marks before doesn’t. It takes a bad one-day story and drags in another day or two, and allows the Trump campaign and her champions in the media to post the skin off the Trump campaign and rob lemon and salt right in there.

Did Hillary Clinton’s team jump the shark and plagiarize the stump litanies of the two speeches? Perhaps. It would be the smart thing to do, to call a repressor and make the case.

But that’s politics. If you don’t like it, you can sue and take some other hobby. And now the Melania issue isn’t just about a speech, but how Donald Trump may have gotten it from a previous president.

You don’t wing a speech at a convention. You make sure it’s not taken from someone else. Not doing so causes legiti- mate questions about whether you have any idea how to run a successful political campaign. And you don’t wing it in the Oval Office. The speech was clearly trying to please the political timekeepers at the speech’s time limit and the American people and win the day.

But the Trump campaign doesn’t seem to be able to do that. Why? I can’t say why the speechwriter is one of Donald Trump’s tools and family mem- bers or Trump himself. Trump has to come out quickly and explain. She is a good speech, practically well, and the crowd loved her. She had some of the best lines had been delivered by Mrs. Obama.

Trump is a Cohenite, political opponent and former Fox News host based in Paris. She is the host of the syndicated talk show “Unbreakable with Rachel Marsden” Tuesdays at 7 p.m. Eastern time on unbreakable.com.

Hillary Clinton’s campaign has already been bashed, and burned, and made fun of, before. Best, shades the truth. But it’s understandable why Trump campaign foolishly denies plagiarism. The smart thing to do would be to present the metaphoric head of Melania Trump’s speechwriter to the media. Make it a “Game of Thrones” moment, just put it as a side note outside the Republican con- vention hall, let CNN and the Fox News and the rest of the crowd jeer at the gaping face and leave to the other parties and center and up road.

Republicans have already been jumping to imitate plagiarizers or cribbing: President Barack Obama lifting from a foreign Barack speech, something pointed out again recently by Hillary Clinton’s campaign in 2008. And Joseph Biden committing plagiarism in law school and borrowing from a speech by British politician Nigel Farage.

But President Barack Obama, making it a no-no. And Biden apparently does what ever he wants because he’s thought of as a crazy stake- holder in the basement playing with string and therefore is not responsible for the many stu- pid things he says or does.

Locals getting more exercise playing Pokémon Go nightly

JESSICA HERNER

Every evening for the past few weeks, neighbors have noticed unusual activity outside the Tooele City Library. The reason? The library is surrounded by Pokémon, fortune cookies courtesy of Japanese business The Pokémon Company.

“I love it. You walk across the street from the library, and after dark it’s a huge beacon for people to play Pokémon Go,” said Tooele resident Al Miller. “I guess the library is kind of a special spot for the game. Every night since the game came out, there have been people hanging out here.”

In addition to Pokémon, there are three Poké Stops at the library, where players of the video game Pokémon Go can deposit or pick up items to help them in the game. For example, players stop by to pick up a Poké Ball or any of the many Poké Balls and Poké Poké Plums that align with plant science judging.

The reason? The library is kind of a special spot for the game. Every night since the game came out, there have been people hanging out. Walker, the library’s circulation staff, said it was because people are talking about it, and reading and trading items before they come in. Walker noted the game has helped living people together. “There’s a somewhat social aspect because people are talking about it, and reading and trading items before they come in.”

The Pokémon media series, movies, toys and more, is surrounded by Pokémon, cards, an animated television series, manga, too and more, according to the Parent’s Guide to Pokémon.

On July 6, developer Niantic, The Pokémon Company and Nintendo released Pokémon Go for mobile devices. As of July 26, the game had been downloaded more than 50 million times, according to Android’s Play Store. It is also the highest-grossing application on Apple’s App Store.

One aspect that sets Pokémon Go apart from other video games is it requires people to go outside and search for Pokémon. The game also gives incentives to people to walk or bike instead of driving their cars.

Michael Conklin moved to Tooele a few months ago. He likes to play Pokémon Go around town. “It’s a great way to get him out of the house,” he said.

In addition to Pokémon, there are three Poké Stops at the library, where players of the video game Pokémon Go can deposit or pick up items to help them in the game. Players stop by to pick up a Poké Ball or any of the many Poké Balls and Poké Plums that align with plant science judging.

The reason? The library is kind of a special spot for the game. Every night since the game came out, there have been people hanging out. Walker, the library’s circulation staff, said it was because people are talking about it, and reading and trading items before they come in. Walker noted the game has helped living people together. “There’s a somewhat social aspect because people are talking about it, and reading and trading items before they come in.”

A strong curriculum ties the plants selected for the learning garden at Tooele High School to the classroom instruction, with plants that need to be studied for the judging competitions. This project further advances to use of their grandchildren. Many students participated in the design, and removal, cement work and planning. Field trip experiences include the demonstration garden. The project was about observing, problem solving, and making choices. The kind of mental skills we all need to have.

Local residents have been very active in their teaching, organizing, leadership and service to students. Thanks to all those students who worked hard to make this learning garden possible. From TEF and the FFA to Cargill. Thank you for enhancing quality education in Tooele County Schools.

If you have any questions, please contact Cargill. Thanks students and teachers!

One of the short-term parts of the recovery, the Red Cross shelter set up at West Elementary, was closed Thursday night at 7 p.m. No one stayed at the shelter Wednesday night, as they had found housing at a hotel, or with friends and family. Families affected by the fire should contact the Red Cross, however, to get in contact with a case worker who will continue to aid after their recovery.

Whitehouse said additional resources can be found via the Valley Behavioral Health Crisis Line at (435) 882-5600 or the County at (435) 566-5938. Insurance advocates were already on scene Thursday for affected residents with homeowners or renters insurance, Whitehouse said. While some cleanup efforts have already begun, the Tooele County landfill is working to allocate space for the solid waste, he said.

"For us, making the neighborhood safe is a high priority right now," Whitehouse said. The landfill is expected to be able to accept large amounts of fire waste by the Thursday, according to TCEM. Fire-related waste can't be mixed with normal garbage due to concerns about the flammability or fire-starting capabilities of the waste. Whitehouse said, however, to those looking to regroup "to talk to a volunteer through the agency's website at team. tce.org. They have taken information about where a volunteer can help them out or to help and areas in which they are setting up volunteers.

"They need to let emergency management know that they're selling to volunteer and willing to help," Whitehouse said. "They also need to understand that we're not doing this in the emergency that it's going to take some time."

By signing up with TCEM, residents will be able to assist in future disasters and be better deployed to assist with the difficulty as the recovery from last week's fire.

"What we find is, help is usually available for the short-term, but it's difficult for the long term," Whitehouse said. Monetary donations are still being accepted at any Town Bank branch in the "Tooele Fire Relief Fund" account. A phone bank donation by KSL on Friday facilitated raising more than $33,000 for victims of the fire.

There has been no additional information on the arson investigation, but detectives are following up on leads, according to Tooele City Police Officer Officer (now retired) Jason Barger, 24, of Tooele, was questioned by police and then booked into the Tooele County Detention Center on suspicion of committing, surrounding warrants. show@tooeletranscript.com

Veteran and Cody researched (left), and Candace Hoogle (below) work on their chalkboard hunger project in the craft cabin. Instead of being sold by the artist, the pieces of artwork will be auctioned off to raise money for those who have suffered the loss of a military family member in combat or suicide. The children participated in numerous recreational activities, including a campfire and overnight stay at Camp Wapiti.

It will take more than a ball and a coach to heal this broken town.

Fourteen-year-old Joe Lacey knows that Tooele, Utah, is a town divided. Tensions are already running high with the Depression making money tight and jobs scarce. But then Sterling Harris comes to town, a new coach with a daring plan to turn things around and to find victory for his football team and unity for Tooele.

Inspired by true events, this uplifting sports story will bring you a fresh perspective on the past and hope for the future.

Women underrepresented across Utah’s political spectrum

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah elected the nation’s first female state senator in 1996, when Martha Malhef Cannoins defeated her husband and five other candidates to take the seat. But 125 years later, the Utah women lag behind their counterparts in most states because of the state’s influential Mormon influence emphasizing women as mothers and homemakers.

Women make up half the state Legislature is among the top three highest rates in the United States.

Utah’s female elected office workers are limited to the state legislature, although in 1896, Utah had just one female governor — Republican Florence Smith Walker.

The Beehive State has never had a female U.S. senator and only four women have served in the U.S. House of Representatives, including Rep. Mia Love, who now serves in the U.S. House of Representatives. Utah women in politics say professional and social dynamics limit their numbers because the state is deeply influenced by Mormon culture that encourages women to stay at home and raise children.

Kathleen Anderson of Bountiful, president of Utah Women Advocates, emphasized women as mothers and home sacrifices, so if your priorites are to be an integral part of the family unit, it’s seeking a huge sacrifice,” said Anderson, who is a member of the LDS Church.

Women who leave careers to be put out, according to Anderson, can be well-received by employers, whether they’d be well-received by employers, whether they’d be encouraged to stay at home and raise children and then later want to re-start their careers are not always well-received by employers, she added.

That could leave women questioning their accomplishments and whether they’ll be qualified for like public office, Anderson said.

Utah women also have the opportunity to run for office, said Salt Lake City Mayor Jackie Biskupski, one of Utah’s three female mayors for the state’s 245 cities and towns.

Fires

In information officer Ryan Wilhite. The fire was quickly contained and extinguished, he said.

The largest wildfire in the county, dubbed the Choke Cherry Fire, continued to burn in the Deep Creek Mountains about eight miles north of Callan. The fire has burned more than 1,800 acres of land but is considered 75 percent contained.

Tooele County did a good job abiding by fire restrictions, including a prohibition on discharging fireworks, though an unattended campfire had to be put out, according to Wilhite.

A grass fire near Adobe Rock was one of four fires ignited by lightning last weekend in Tooele County. Crews from the North Tooele Fire Department doused the flames before they spread.

In Utah, the number of cases of data collected by the National Conference of State Legislatures decreased, according to an analyst by The Associated Press of data collected by the National Conference of State Legislatures.

In the neighboring states of Colorado and Arizona, about three out of every 10 state lawmakers are women — among the top three highest rates in the United States. Utah’s female elected office workers are limited to the state legislature, though in 1896, Utah had just one female governor — Republican Florence Smith Walker.

The Beehive State has never had a female U.S. senator and only four women have served in the U.S. House of Representatives, including Rep. Mia Love, who now serves along with three men holding the remaining congressional jobs.

Utah women in politics say professional and social dynamics limit their numbers because the state is deeply influenced by Mormon culture that encourages women to stay at home and raise children.

Kathleen Anderson of Bountiful, president of Utah Federations of Republican Women, and girls in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are taught from an early age that their greatest calling is to be mothers.

Entering politics “is a tremendous financial sacrifice, time sacrifice, and away from home sacrifice, so if your priorities are to be an integral part of the family unit, it’s seeking a huge sacrifice,” said Anderson, who is a member of the LDS Church.

Last week, fire crews from across the area responded to a grass fire on the west side of Tooele City that destroyed 10 homes and damaged eight more. Between 80 and 100 firefighters from nine different agencies joined together in an effort to stop the fast-moving fire, and their efforts saved several more homes from being destroyed.

The community came together to help the 40-50 residents who were displaced by the blaze, which authorities said was intentionally set. Those who were displaced spent that evening at a shelter set up at West Elementary School. Most are now staying with family or friends, according to the American Red Cross.

Community members were quick to donate food and water to the victims of the fire — so much so that Tooele County Emergency Management had more than enough donations by midmorning the day after the fire.

American Red Cross officials encourage those who wish to provide assistance to the victims of the July 19 fire to donate to the Tooele Fire Relief Fund at any Zions Bank branch.

Aragon was in the area and acting suspicious.

Jesus Aragon was not a resident of his mother’s house, according to the probable cause statement.

When officers arrived on scene, they went to the front door and knocked but received no response. They made contact with Jesus Aragon through an open window on the southeast side of the home, where he was found asleep on a bed, the statement said.

Officers asked him to come out to speak with them and he did so willingly, Turnbow said.

Tooele City police entered the home and found Marcella Aragon deceased on the living room floor with obvious signs of an assault, according to the probable cause statement.

Upon exiting the house, Aragon threw himself on the ground in front of the home and began screaming and crying, the statement said.

The responding police spoke with Jesus but he resisted arrest and got into a scuffle with officers, Turnbow said.

He was safely taken into custody and transported to the Tooele City Police Department for questioning, where he was cooperative with investigators.

During an interview with Tooele City police, Aragon admitted to the murder of his mother, the probable cause statement said.

Turnbow said there were obvious signs of a struggle but no definitive cause of death or motive had been determined at that point in the investigation. The police investigation has been completed but cause of death will not be released until a report is completed by the state medical examiner’s office, she said.

Marcella Aragon’s brother-in-law, Joe Santistevan, spoke on behalf of the family and thanked the community for their support and the police department.

“We’d like to ask the community to give the family a reasonable amount of time for privacy,” he said.

Santistevan said Marcella Aragon was a fine individual and treated people she came into contact with well.

“She was well liked,” he said. “She was a well-rounded person and it’s very, very sad this had to happen.”

Marcella Aragon had filed for a protective order against her son in April 2014 and it was granted in June of the same year. The protective order was dismissed in July 2015 at her request.

Jesus Aragon had a criminal history, which recently included pleading guilty to misdemeanor charges of falsifying information to a command of law enforcement and presenting false personal information with the intent to be another actual person. He was released at his sentencing hearing in January for the 365 days previously served at the county jail.

Santistevan said he believed that Jesus Aragon suffered from mental health problems, but was unable to give specifics.

In spite of the tragic events, the Aragon family has been handling it the best they can, Santistevan said.

“So far to this point, I feel that they’re holding up good,” he said. “They’re relying on each other, the neighbors and whatnot. They’ll get through it one way or another.”

A homicide has not occurred in Tooele County since the Jesse Horowitz murder in April 2014.

Early goals give the Galaxy a 2-1 win over the Timbers

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — With two goals in the first half, Galaxy midfielder Giovani dos Santos gave Portland a 2-1 victory in Portland. Blake Rusie and Gyasi Zardes each scored for Los Angeles in the 13th and 23rd minutes, respectively, to help the Galaxy (10-3-7) maintain their position atop the Western Conference, while Portland (7-8-4) is in sixth.

Neither team added to the score in the second half, and Portland ended up out-possessing and out-passing the Galaxy in the second half, but on the way out, the Galaxy took the lead from the Timbers that won the game.

“It was the Galaxy’s fourth straight game with an unbeaten streak.”

Neither team scored in the first half, but in the 41st minute of the half, Portland’s Diego Valeri made it 1-0 with a header from a cross. In the 69th minute, Portland added a second goal to its lead when Diego Valeri passed to a teammate who scored from the edge of the box.

“They definitely wanted to come out aggressive and I thought we didn’t know the second half had in.”

When is best time to train your dog?

DEAR P&P: I’ve tried to train in obedience training with my pug, Spaz-tie, "during her morning and evening walks, because I read something like this is the most affective time to do it. But she doesn’t seem to pay attention. And do you have any tips to help her get-ning very fast? — Debra, Chapel Hill, North Carolina

DEAR DON: It’s not that she’s doing anything wrong, it’s that maybe training during walks isn’t right for Spazi-te.

Observe your dog throughout the day for a few days, and see if there’s a time when she appears to be more receptive to your commands? More responsive?
Are there times when she is really hyper and times when she is very relaxed?

Take note of these behavior and the times of day when she seems more common.
Then, adapt your behavior training to take place during these times and how often do she react?

Some dogs are extremely responsive to sounds. Or, “Hey, it’s time to eat.”
I’m pretty sure it’s time to feed me. I need to eat. I can’t think of anything else until you feed me or, when Spazi-te is out for her walks, she may be focused on finding the perfect place to poop. That’s why her behavior in going to the toilet may vary from place to place.

You can work on simple behavior training and command-ent throughout the day.
Dogs are different, they prefer to see and smell, and their behavior changes according to their mood and how they feel.

Some pets are better at learning when they are relaxed and are more interested in training than when they are stressed or agitated.

While there are no hard and definite rules for training your dog, there are some general tips that can help make the process easier and more effective.

Mystery writer Larry G. Jones answers your questions.

Q: Mr. Gregory was named in Weymouth, Massachusetts, when he got married, she received these three vases created by Henry Grueby, a Boston potter. Although it is not all that familiar with pottery from that part of the county, I think all three are in the Arts and Crafts style, so are they Grueby pottery worth keeping?

— Ramona, Augusta, Maine

A: According to Schneider in his ‘Grueby Faience’ Guide published by Collector Books, your vases are not by Grueby.

Grueby Faience was the name of a glass factory in Boston and begin-experiencing with an art form, forming deposited glazes in blue, grey, yellow, brown, and rose-green. What made his glazes unique is they were executed in soft shades without gloss. In 1900, Grueby established his work at the Pot’s Exhibition in San Diego, and three gold medals.

Grueby and Sons were hand-hewn and hand-decorated.

The Lesson of the Gypsy Princess

(A Spanish Tale) adapted by Amy Friedman and illustrated by Meredith Johnson

He was as unhappy as any man I know," the gardener said. "I don't think he is thinking about anyone who is in love.

"He seems sad," the gardener said. "I don't believe he has a princess.

After that, the dove came every day to the garden. Each day, the gardener would ask it, "Where did you come from?" and each day, the gardener's answers became more detailed. "I am unembellished as any man knows," the dove answered.

One day, the gardener told the prince about the dove. "When the prince heard about the orange sunshine, he ordered the gardener to capture her.

The next day, when the dove appeared, the gardener caught her and put her in a golden cage and he carried the cage to the prince. The moment the prince saw the dove, he felt his heart expand with love. He opened the cage, dove, reached in and lifted her out. Then he held her and she began to sing. "What a beautiful creature you are," said the prince. Moved by affection, he began to stroke the dove's head, and as he did, he felt a pin. "What is this?"

"I'm going to travel the world until I find her," the Prince said.
