The city has experienced localized flooding within this segment of the market, and the flood depth far exceeded these three risks,” said Tooele City Engineer Paul Hansen. “Another significant additional benefit will be that it allows the city to expand the system to the south and adjacent districts.

Precipitation for December averaged 4.33 inches compared to normal precipitation of 4.10 inches. Tooele also received 18.5 inches of snowfall near the door.

Tooele City police were able to learn Michael and Pernis, who were wearing dark-colored coats, were inside the residence and he was chased. As his bedroom by one of the men, the statement read. He could not follow them to the residence but he was inside where he went.

"Brandon" inside it, according to the statement said. The items were photographed and taken as evidence.

Doerr’s vehicle became stuck on the roadway and evidence indicated he attempted to free the car by digging it free. At the scene, Doerr was found with a vehicle key, as well as a key to the home. A temporary driver’s license belonging to Jordan was also found on the ground near the vehicle, as well as a .380 caliber handgun. The probable cause for December 2016 was driven by Adult Probation and Parole. Romero is scheduled to make his initial appearance in 3rd District Court before Judge Robert Adkins and no bail was set in the case. A roll call hearing is scheduled for Feb. 23 at 9 a.m.

While an autopsy has not yet been completed, Doerr’s cause of death is believed to be exposure to extreme elements, Turnbow said. There is no requirement to wait 24 hours in such a case that a person may be missing or endangered. Turnbow said.

Jobs

Tooele County’s economy has experienced steady local job growth since April 2014 when jobs in the county dropped to 14,824. The growth on the county’s job market in 2016 was driven largely by the private sector, according to the Department of Workforce Services. DWS attributes the decline in the manufacturing sector to the closing of the chemical plant in the warehousing sector. Business and financial services, healthcare, and in a small turn around, the federal government, also contributed to job growth, according to DWS.

With an unemployment rate of 3.6 percent in December, Tooele County’s workforce continued to grow as it had 1,100 unemployed workers actively seeking work. That’s 1,136 more people with jobs in the county in December 2016 compared to December 2015 for a 4 percent increase.

The workforce numbers included people in the county over the age of 16 that either had jobs or were actively looking for a job. In Tooele County, 76.3 percent of the county’s population over 18 is in the workforce, slightly higher than the state-wide workforce participation rate of 75 percent. Basically the workforce participation rate is 6.5 percent.

There were 38 key people unaccounted for in Tooele County during December 2016 compared to December 2015, a 3.3 percent drop. The average monthly wage earned in Tooele County’s unemployment rate for December 2016 is the lowest among Utah’s 29 counties. The county with the highest December unemployment rate is Morgan County at 2.8 percent.

For over 20 years, Rick Covello & Allen Patch offered the best prices in Utah and they are at it again.

she said. Cordova said she doesn’t see the same people picking up food, but instead many of the children come in once or twice when they are short on cash for food and need a little help to make it to the end of the month.

“We had one man in the other day. He has his year old son that lives with him,” Cordova said. “He is eligible for disability benefits and has applied for them, but he can’t start getting the benefits for a few more weeks. We needed some food for him and he came out and brought his little boy and some food for them."

Expected medical bills or a high energy bill can sometimes force people to choose between buying food to pay their bills, she said. “Some people that live here don’t see it, but we do have a poor community here in Tooele,” Cordova said. “Yes, we have some jobs, but sometimes the jobs are insufficient to provide what they need them.

People that are homeless or couch surfing may not have access to a computer and many job openings and applications are now a computer, according to Cordova.

Couch surfing is term for homeless people who stay with a friend or relative, sleeping on the couch or in a spare bedroom. When the circumstances change, they sleep out or bed-hopping friend to friend with with little to no place to store their belongings.

Couch surfing is the only challenge for homeless people, according to Cordova. “Once they get a job, they need to find a place to live the job,” she said. “Public housing and the county is not very good, and if they have children, the county does not have money for that.”

The few people who many people see when they come to the resource center for help is team loaded from Trophies.

“People come in and they will usually start with something like ‘Hey, I just need a little food,’” Trujillo said. “And we help them with that, but if we can get them talking, we can soon find out what they really need.”

The need for food is a consequence of something else, like needing help with a job search, finding a place to live that’s affordable, job hunting, budgeting skills, or something else, she said. “We try to find out what their real needs are and then if it isn’t something we can help them with, we can refer them to whom they can get help,” Cordova said. The resource center has limited funds to help with what is called ‘gap financing’. With rapid rehousing funds, Cordova can help pay for the deposit and part of a first month’s rent.

“That gives people time to get on their feet and start paying their own rent after that,” Trujillo said.

In addition to helping with housing, the resource center has emergency sack lunches, and personal hygiene kits, donated and assembled by local church groups.

Valley Behavioral Health runs the resource center through grants and donations. Other donations made to the Trophies Resource Center and Food Bank go directly to support the resource center.

The resource center’s goal is to provide temporary assistance to help people become independent again, according to Trujillo. “We love the people that we help,” she said. “But if we are successful, we won’t see them again.”

The Tooele Resource Center and Food Bank are in need of food to fill their shelves. According to staff at the food bank, the most needed food items are hearty soups and stews, chili, canned meat like beans and bacon, pasta, lunchmeat and cereal.

The local food bank can also use canned products such as tomatoes, corn, soup, green beans, peas, green peas, black beans, pinto beans, mushrooms, anchovies, and canned pineapple, orange juice, and fruit salad.

Donations can be dropped off at the food bank at 38 S. Main Street in Tooele City. Cash donations are also accepted.

Hours for the resource center are Monday-Friday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The center is closed on Saturdays. The center has an open house at 6 p.m. on the second Tuesday of every month from September through May and Wednesdays, the food bank closes for distribution at 11:30 a.m. The resource center and food bank also accept donations in the form of gift cards.

“Throughout the day, when I am the class is getting too long, too long, we do break, which seems lose some kind of movement,” she said. “When there are in real busy day, due to weather, we do fit kids DVD, which is 31 or 30 minutes of aerobic exercise. We also do this same DVD workout if there is not a physical education class for the week. Every Wednesday, our whole grade level run 1 or miles outside before they can have free time.”

Trujillo said various teachers are promoting healthier classroom practices and many are encouraging students to eat healthier using their own gardens, carrots, fruit, vegetables and whole grains.

Stansbury wrestler Witkowski bounces back from injury during strong junior season

For the second time in as many seasons, the Grantsville Cowboys have qualified an individual to the Division I state wrestling tournament. Junior Nolan Witkowski qualified after finishing second in the 132-pound weight class at Region 10 on Saturday.

Witkowski had a 16-7 record on the season, including second-place finishes at the Bountiful Invitational and Best of the West tournament.

Led by junior Dawson Roberts, Tooele came out on top 64-28 in the Region 10 semifinal game at Grantsville High School on Friday night, advancing to the Division I state wrestling tournament. The Buffs opened a 13-point lead in the first quarter and never looked back.

The Grantsville boys basketball season ended in heartbreaking fashion as the Cowboys fell 44-24 on Friday night in the Division I Region 10 semifinals. The Cowboys went into the week ranked No. 1 in the state, but were trounced by Grantsville, who knocked them off of the top spot.

The Grantsville boys basketball team topped Union 48-30 on Wednesday night to remain unbeaten in Region 10 play, but the Cowboys weren’t in a much of a celebration mood after a lackluster showing.

now prepare to meet first-place Tooele in the Region 10 tournamen-

Witkowski’s win was important for the Cowboys as they look to qualify for the state wrestling tournament.

The Cowboys are one of the favorites among the Division I teams, and they have a good chance to bring home a championship.

The Cowboys’ Brevan Nielsen hit three 3-pointers in the final frame and gave Union a 17-16 lead with 5:01 left in the first half. The Cowboys didn’t have a lead the rest of the game.

The Cowboys opened the game on a 7-0 run, but the Buffs got hot and made it 17-17 with 4:58 left in the first quarter. The Buffs scored on a layup by Trevor Colson, and a technical foul cost Tooele eight points. Junior Aidan Thane Eyre had eight points off the bench, and the Cowboys were in the game on a 7-0 run, but the Buffs got hot and made it 17-17 with 4:58 left in the first quarter. As her high school graduation approached last spring, Hannah Christopherson was looking for ways to pay for her college education and became intrigued by the Tooele County Dairy Princess Program. Less than a year later, Christopherson has become one of the state’s dairy ambassadors, spreading the message about dairy products’ nutritional value statewide.

“It’s a great honor,” Christopherson said. “In Tooele, there aren’t any dairy farms, so we have to spend even more time promoting it so people can be knowledgeable in that subject. It’s because it’s not really around them. Being able to come from Tooele and represent the state ... It’s cool to come from a smaller place like that and be able to teach others and share our message with them.”

Christopherson didn’t know much about dairy when she first applied for the program, but she did know about nutrition, so she made the most of her experience.

she began studying to learn more about dairy and products. Through her studies, she came upon a presentation that compared the health benefits of dairy products to other things such as soda and candy, and was named Tooele County Dairy Princess last year. “I’ve always loved the part of giving milk and chocolate milk out and doing little presentations and serving projects in Tooele promoting dairy,” she said. “I’ve gotten to spend time with kids and a lot of people in the community, getting to know them better while getting to teach them about dairy.”

Since becoming a part of the program, she has had the opportunity to visit a dairy farm and see how everything works, giving her a greater appreciation for what it takes to get a jug of milk or a gallon of ice cream to more people.

“That was really cool to see all the hard work that goes into it,” she said. “It’s a full-time job. A lot of people just go to the store, buy their milk and drink it and they don’t understand how much work goes into it.”

She and her attendants gave presentations at a 4-H convention, and also volunteered at the National Veterans Wheelchair Games. She has also given presentations to kids at Liberty Park in Salt Lake City about the health benefits of dairy, and will soon be taking her presentation to elementary schools throughout the state.

Part of her presentation focuses on how something like chocolate milk can serve as a valuable recovery drink after exercise, as well as a healthy alternative to other sweet drinks.

“When you compare the health benefits of, say, chocolate milk compared to a sports drink just post-exercise, sports drinks don’t have any protein in it, which you need,” said Christopherson.

Christopherson explained that some people cut dairy from their diet because of the fat, but your body does need a little bit of fat, just in moderation. Chocolate milk right now is actually known as the best recovery drink because of the protein and sugar it has in it, and 90 percent of it is sugar, so it is able to rehydrate your body along with giving you back the protein that you need.

A few weeks ago, Christopherson took part in the state dairy ambassador competition, where she gave the same presentation she did during the Tooele County competition. She had an interview with judges about her personal life and her dairy knowledge, and also had the opportunity to meet one of the state ambassadors for the first time.

“It’s been amazing,” she said. “I’ve been able to meet a lot of great people in my community and in the state as a whole. You can make a difference in more ways than you can imagine.”

Service has been an ongoing theme in Christopherson’s life. She was a student body officer at Stansbury High. She has given presentations to kids at Liberty Park in Salt Lake City about the health benefits of dairy, and the Tooele County Dairy Princess last year.

She has also volunteered at the National Veterans Wheelchair Games. She has also given presentations to kids at Liberty Park in Salt Lake City about the health benefits of dairy, and the Tooele County Dairy Princess last year.

Her time as a volunteer at Primary Children’s has also inspired her future career choice as a child life specialist. She currently is majoring in human development and nutrition at Brigham Young University.

“To be able to work with kids and to give them to social tools that make a difference in their life,” she said. “Seeing the difference they make in the kids’ lives, I think I would love to be a child life specialist.”

Christopherson said her experience in the dairy ambassador program has been beyond anything she could have imagined.

Let it snow!

tember of some of my first experiences in this area. My family brought me here from time to time to support my sister and her operations in the franchise company I worked with. In fact, I was soon to become a franchisor of the company. The franchise company was the Stephen Covey Institute. The Covey Institute of Highly Effective People. Usually, my way went through warmer weather. Ware her in the cold, snow went, and we were always following a lot. The beautiful settings in the Tooele Valley.

When it became apparent that the company was going to make a move to the top, we were brought up to visit. It was COOL! The allure of the area was powerful. No imagery could convey what we had and we made the move.

The first real experience our friends and their operations in the franchise company went through was when it snowed, in June, that year — right here in the Tooele Valley. Of top, on outdoor in the snow, it was very different from anything we had seen. The snow covered the ground, and expressing something like snow sideways. It was difficult to see the way the snow was moving. The high winds blew the snow into hard slabs or chunks. I knew the difference between the powder and heavy, wet snow. I've seen what a bit of snow can do to the visionary landscape, and how much that has been walked on or driven over compacted and blown into hard slabs or chunks. I'm not sure what a bit of snow can do to the visionary landscape, and I'm not sure what a bit of snow can do to the visionary landscape.

It was apparent this place was essentially a tundra! It was apparent this place was essentially a tundra! It was apparent this place was essentially a tundra! It was apparent this place was essentially a tundra!

Setting goals vital for families, households with special needs

Elayne Pearson

A new month, a new year, another chance to sit down and list all of the things we’re going to do. Or are we? How often do we actually make new goals? How often do we sit down and write them down? How often do we plan to make changes in our lives? How often do we actually follow through with those plans?

Some years ago, the second best goal that I set for myself was to improve my health. I tried to eat healthier, I started exercising regularly, and I made an effort to get more sleep. But despite all of these efforts, I still didn’t feel like I was doing enough. So, I decided to set a new goal for myself: to lose weight. And that’s what I did. I lost 20 pounds in just six months.

I’ve learned that setting goals is important for everyone, whether they have special needs or not. It’s especially important for families with special needs, because we’re often faced with unexpected challenges and obstacles. Setting goals can help us to stay focused and motivated, and can also help us to feel more in control.

One of the most important things that I’ve learned about setting goals is that they should be specific, measurable, and achievable. That means that they should be realistic, and that they should be something that we can actually accomplish. It’s also important to make sure that they’re something that we care about, because that will help us to stay motivated.

I’ve found that it’s also helpful to break down big goals into smaller, more manageable ones. For example, if I want to lose weight, I might start by setting a goal to eat a healthier diet, or to go for a walk every day. And then, when I’ve accomplished those goals, I might set a new one, like exercising for at least 30 minutes a day.

Another thing that I’ve learned is that it’s important to celebrate our successes, no matter how small they are. When I reach a goal, I try to reward myself with something that I enjoy, like a new pair of shoes or a day off.

So, if you’re looking to make some changes in your life, I encourage you to sit down and write out some goals for yourself. And remember, it’s never too late to start.

Happy New Year!

E ven though this will be an article short on words, it can be very valuable to help keep your Mac clean. Over time, log files can occupy a large amount of space on your hard drive and cleaning them up from time-to-time can help free up extra space. In older versions of OS X, before El Capitan, there were times that maintenance would automatically run to clean up your log files, but not in OS X 10.12 Sierra, the maintenance program will run when your Mac is turned on for a long period of time, and it will always run when you shut your Mac down. For example, if you have a computer that is turned on constantly, it will run the maintenance to clean these log files.

However, there is an easy way to manually delete log files. If you have recently reim- ounted your operating system and performed a clean install, you may not have any log files saved. If you have recently started using your computer, there may still be some log files saved. If though, your Mac has been running for a long period of time, not enough maintenance may have been run, and it will still schedule to restart your machine, after updates are installed, outside of your active hours. When some Windows Updates are installed, it is necessary that your machine be restarted to finish the installation. So that your work (or play) time isn’t interrupted, restart will not happen during the active hours you set.

This accomplishes two things. First, you won’t be in the middle of your work (or play) and all of a sudden, a restart is required to finish updating and you won’t have to save and close all your open windows in order to restart your computer. Second, this allows a systematic way of making sure your computer remains updated with the latest Windows protection.

To set Active Hours, click on your Start button and then click Settings icon. The Settings icon looks like a gear or a cogs icon and is located on the left side of the screen. Click on the gear icon to open the Settings. Click on Update & Security. Under the heading “Change active hours” click the “Change active hours” link.

Select the time you typically use your computer during active hours. You can save your hours chosen, click “Save.”

T he concise handbook of medical advice stores together the most bizarre and duplicitous cures recommended by healers to their patients from Ancient Greece to the twentieth century. It features such delightful passages for the above-mentioned cure, “A snail’s blood for a sore throat,” as well as the more humorous and odd advice, the book also contains many pictures of the remedies and odd advice, the book also contains many pictures of the remedies used in different times and places.

Along with such interesting and odd advice, the book also contains many pictures of the original advertisements and written passages for the above-mentioned cure. These addi- tions are as entertaining as the text. This is a must-have book for those who like exploring the “science” behind medicines. I wonder if future readers will think our convictions are as strange and unusual.

You hear neighbors complaining about how much they dislike washing their windows and other weekend chores.

One way to make money is to get a job. But that is not possible for everyone. Oftentimes, kids can’t get jobs because they are too young to work.

But that hasn’t stopped kids around the world from finding clever ways of earning some cash by becoming entrepreneurs. It takes some creativity and patience, but you can be an entrepreneur, too!

Grantsville, which is now 5-0 in league play with a 27-2 overall record, is one game away from earning at least a share of the Region 10 championship.

And during that stretch of wins, the Cowboys have outscored their share of big teams and blcrapers, the latest being Union.

In the first nine games, when Tooele was by 40, except the home game against Grantsville with a one-spot win and Park City by 27 before Tuesday’s 11-point victory.

“It’s really one game at a time, but we tend not to look too much about the mentality and approach to instruction during training sessions. When someone does something good, we kind of settle back down. We kind of just move on to the next game.”

“I think the idea is there,” she continued. “But we know we have to take it one game at a time even to get to that point.”

Now holding the clubhouse on Union and with Park City all but mathematically eliminated from a playoff spot, the only teams that can still chal- lenge Tooele for a guaranteed trip to the state playoffs are Stansbury and Tooele.

But that also means being at least 10 games behind the Cowboys, who have three games left, after the Cowboys had already played 14 games.

It’s your Health, your Money, ...and your Choice!
How to organize your affairs

Dear Paul,

I know you have been thinking about getting your personal and financial affairs in order so that your kids will know what to do if you become ill or die. What can you do?

—Procrastinating Paul

Dear Procrastinating Paul,

Organizing your affairs is a huge job, but by breaking it down into smaller tasks, you can make it manageable. Here’s how to get started:

1. Create a will. Make sure your will is up to date and includes everything you need, such as a guardian for your children, a beneficiary for your assets, and instructions for your funeral arrangements.

2. Keep important documents in one place. Make sure you have a safe, secure place to store your financial and legal documents, such as your will, living will, power of attorney, and medical directives. You can use a safety deposit box or a home safe.

3. Review your medical information. Include a list of medications you take, any health conditions you have, and any allergies and conditions.

4. Organize your photos and videos. Make sure your family and loved ones have access to your personal mementos.

5. Update your contact information. If you’ve changed your phone number or email address, let your friends, family, and financial advisors know.

6. Keep track of your assets. Make a list of all the assets you own, including bank accounts, investment accounts, real estate, and personal possessions.

7. Review your insurance policies. Make sure your insurance policies are up to date and cover what you need.

8. Plan for your funeral. Make pre-arrangements with a funeral home, and include a list of medications you take and any funeral instructions.

9. Consider leaving a donation. If you have a choice, consider donating to a charity of your choice.

10. Stay updated. Keep your lists and documents up to date, and update them every year or whenever your situation changes.

It’s never too late to organize your affairs. Taking control of your financial and legal matters will give you peace of mind and protect your loved ones.

Sincerely,

Dear Paul,

I hope these tips help you get started. Good luck!

Bake Valentine's sugar cookies

For the Valentine’s Day sweater, or just a little extra something special, bake a batch of these sugar cookies. I have a feeling you’ll be running out of cookies before you know it. It makes a perfect treat to share with family and friends. The recipe makes enough for about 50 small cookies. It’s a tasty way to say thanks and show some love on Valentine’s Day. — Tim Boger, Wisconsin Daily Star

VALENTINE'S DAY SUGAR COOKIES (50)

1 cup (2 sticks) unsalted butter, softened
2 cups (16 oz.) white sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 large egg white, beaten
5 cups powdered sugar, sifted

1. Preheat oven to 375°F. Lightly grease cookie sheets with shortening.
2. In a large mixing bowl, cream together the butter and sugar until fluffy. Add the eggs and vanilla and mix well. Add the flour and salt. Mix until the dough comes together. Chill in the refrigerator for at least one hour. Remove from refrigerator and place small balls of dough on an ungreased baking sheet with parchment. Bake one dough ball at a time with powdered sugar, and cut out shapes with your favorite sugar cookie cutter. (If dough sticks to your fingers, dip tip of knife or fork in powdered sugar.) Bake 8–10 minutes or until edges are set. Cool slightly on baking sheet before removing. Store in an airtight container.

Donna's Sugar Cookie Tips

- Don't overwork the dough. It is important to handle the dough as little as possible.
- For a professional finish, gently press the edges of the cookies against the parchment paper.
- To achieve the perfect shape, keep your fingers damp with water while working with the dough.
- Use a piping bag or a small spoon to apply the powdered sugar.
- For a decorative touch, use edible glitter or food coloring.
- Store the cookies in an airtight container to maintain their freshness.
- These cookies are best enjoyed within one week of baking.
