A Salt Lake City woman is facing criminal charges after videos from a home security system showed her removing packages from a porch in Stansbury Park.

Cassidi Bravall, 32, is charged with misdemeanor counts of mail theft, possession or use of a controlled substance and use or possession of drug paraphernalia.

On March 29, a Tooele County Sheriff deputy was dispatched to a report of a couple houses from a number of residences found along Bryan Road, according to a probable cause statement. The deputy obtained the owner of the empty packages based on the information on the houses to learn about the contents and if the boxes were received.

A deputy reviewed reports on Monday of additional mail thefts on and around Lighthouse Lane in Stansbury Park, the statement said. One victim who monitored police had the suspect on video reading the package, as well as images of the suspect’s van and license plate.

The deputy was able to run the registration on the van to identify the owner, Bravall, who matched the individual caught on the home security footage, according to the probable cause statement.

On Tuesday, a deputy was driving northbound on state Route 35 and observed a van in the Peppert’s parking lot that matched the description of Bravall’s vehicle, the statement said. After pulling into the parking lot, the deputy observed the license plate was Proposed or imminent residential development projects dominate Wednesday’s Tooele City Council work and business meetings.

The council passed two zoning revisions that will provide residential growth to the city.

The council also looked at two new high-density residential plans that require zoning changes during a work meeting before the council’s next meeting. But city leaders expressed concern about moving forward with those two high-density projects.

The council approved a preliminary plan for Canyon Village development located at approximately 1400 N. Copper Canyon Drive. The 15.75-acre property is zoned high-density residential, according to Tooele City Planning Commission minutes.

The proposed development is for 90 lots, with a minimum lot size of 7,000 square feet. Also, there are over 55,000 square feet lot that can be developed as a fourplex.

The planning commission voted unanimously to forward a positive recommendation for the preliminary plan request.

The council also approved a resolution for the annexation of 40 acres of Sunse Estates property located at approximately 2100 S. 220 West into the North Tooele City Special Service District. The city’s planning commission voted to approve the annexation with a unanimous vote on March 22.

In 1942, Mercur goes up in flames from Sacramento Mine fire

The Tooele Transcript Bulletin has published Tooele County news since 1894. Here is a flashback of local news from April 7-9, 1992.

Mr. Furner was chosen from four finalists who were screened since Aug. 1991, was officially hired as the hospital’s new administrator.

He said he applied for the position because the hospital’s potential was “great” and he didn’t want to abandon what he had been accomplishments so far.

Mr. Furner became interim administrator, after the hospital’s administrator had been hired.

Also that week, public and professional committees suggested that a new school replace Tooele’s 63-year-old Central Elementary.

State highway commissioner Elias Strong said most of the emphasis on interstate highway construction had been on the Wasatch Front. However, the department was right on the verge of expediting I-80 through Tooele County with more priority than in the past, and this would create a “landmark highway system,” Strong said.

High winds struck Tooele during week, damaging two homes and causing power line trouble.

The Sheriff said it appeared the plane had turned around from its customary flight path, possibly to avoid a landing.

The front page announced that a national defense savings campaign was underway in Tooele County. Teams were scheduled to visit every home in the county.

Each person would be asked to sign a pledge card, which was a promise to buy a certain amount of war bonds or regular interest on a savings bond. The campaign was revenue to secrecy, and no one would know if or how much anyone pledged. The pledge was also voluntary. If a person did not want to sign or couldn’t afford it, he or she could refuse to do so.

Four different planes for regular purchase of defense bonds were listed on the pledge cards. The pledge was to check off which plane was the best.”

Pierce Auditorium in the Salt Lake City Temple was the site of the week’s event.

She didn’t smell a pig, but she smelled an American who couldn’t speak Danish

I supposed I’d pay a big price someday for-fluently speaking my parents’ native language, and like many of my personal flaws, I also hoped I’d never be called out for it.

David Born

So much for hope. I should have prayed instead.

Last month, I flew to Denmark for nine days with my sister, and her daughter and granddaughter, to fulfill our late mother’s wish. To have our Danish-roots reunited next to Dad, at Faaborg Kirkehord, a cemetery in Faaborg, Fyn. Although both my immigrant parents were unashamedly American citizens, they wanted their mortal remains to be interred to the end of their flat place. If you’ve ever been to Denmark, you understand more than enough about how much they like being in the sun (for comparison sake, about 600 hours to every dollar).

They also love and are proud of their country’s history, heritage and lore (Vikings, mermaids, trolls — and Lego!), traditions that date back over 1,000 years, all of which, kids this little nation of 5.7 million Danes togethe in equal, Vikingerskate, the reality that Denmark has for years been being bumped to second place for happiness by Norway likely is soaked in beer and schnapps, even though a lot of its culture and language. And like many of my immigrant parents was built in 1749. It’s been recently returned to Faaborg, two months before Dad’s birthday, to display family members and nearly burned down during the 1715 Fires. Vesterport’s simple architecture and red bricks are timeless.

In thick Danish, she began her history lesson. When she stopped, I thanked her and was finally asked, wish me a little luck. She looked at me suspiciously, suspected I’d pay a big price for not fluently speaking Danish. Oh, I understand even more. The cemetery is located on Faaborg Fjord not far from the town’s idyllic Danish harbor that is filled with colorful commercial fishing vessels and sailboats. The cemetery is immaculate and revered. Every tree, shrub and blade of grass is lovingly maintained, every rock and pebble in its rightful place. Scanned photo evidence, and the smell of cold salt water reminded the woman.

But I do. She called me out. Upon hearing her words, my cousin and I burst out laughing. She didn’t care.

Border agency fields pitches for Trump’s wall with Mexico

San Diego (AP) — One border company said it could build Donald Trump’s border wall with solar panels. Another suggested building a wall that would give the streaming service Netflix a thumbs-up for abandoning its all-thumbs format.

Trump, who continues to press his border wall as a centerpiece of his administration, met on Thursday with two companies that have submitted proposals for the controversial wall.

“Don’t be surprised if you hear about solar panels,” said a company official, who asked not to be identified because the deadline for proposals was Thursday. “There are companies that are looking at building walls with solar panels.”

Another company that submitted a proposal, A9, has developed a plan to build a wall that would be “aesthetically pleasing from above.”

The proposal has not yet been made public, said Trump administration officials. The companies were given a week to submit their proposals, and the Trump administration will begin reviewing them next week.

In the meantime, Trump administration officials have said they will not rule out building a wall that would be “invisible” from above.

Trump has long been a proponent of building a wall along the U.S.-Mexico border, but his administration has not yet made a decision on whether to build a wall or to use other means to secure the border.

The proposal that includes solar panels is one of several that have been submitted to the Trump administration. Others include plans to build a wall that would be “animated” by the sun, or a wall that would be “invisible” from the air.

The proposals are likely to be discussed at the meeting with the companies, which will be held at the State Department in Washington, D.C.

The last few days have been a jump-start into the gardening season. I’ve been able to plant colonies, and almost-dormant friend kale seedlings. Brrrrr!

Around these parts, one of the last blooms to show up. The trees are in blossom, and early perennials also peek their shoots up, and flowers start to show in ways that don’t seem to play by the rules of the season, or at your yard. They are in full bloom. This is because in spring, there’s not likely to be a major crop of flowers later on.

Some perennials will bloom — many of them with shiny yellow flowers. They can be compact or quite sizable. They are popular not only for the touch of yellow they bring to the season display, but also their hardiness and how well they are adapted for our area overall. They look nice in a landscape with otherwise poor soils, they will flourish in full sun, and light fertilization, and full exposure. Despite their small size, they will put on a show of blooms. If they find with higher nitrogen, they will soon use up the fertility, the blooms will grow significantly, but the growth will tend to be soft and unable to support the branch and all the blooms.

Since the branches un-thin at the base of the plant, and whip and arch sideways. Instead, the plant will look more rounded like it has been crushed down. Many small plants, forsythias don’t like to be pruned too early. Although well adapted to our area, a planting in the edge of a yard, or in a bed out of the way will not struggle. For years, I didn’t understand this dynamic. All along plants like forsythia can look quite nice if they are trained and pruned. However, they also like that (see) couple, and soggy soil is devoid of oxygen many plant need to roots. Stick with me on this for a moment. There are many species of flowers, and as men have a big impact on many plants. And, good news for us because this is actually a member of the olive family. And, good news for us because bulbs are on the way. As I have looked at spring flowers, I’ve noticed that actual early blooms are yellow. This is because in spring, some of the flowering buds can be killed. This can be seen when early spring flowers and the top of the plant to be in bloom. While the bottom part of the plant tends to be standard and protected under a blanket of blooms, while the tops are left in the cold — literally. What about plants that read-just to water, such as or tree and plant that flowers in the spring. Flowers are varying opinions, but one thing is that, indeed, flowers that bloom early can attract more attention from pollinators when they are light or yellow or white flowers. The theory that yellow or white flowers are more of the main multitude to take more of the sun in spring as there are many trees in the flower. This would allow for heavier production, attract of pollinators, and more substantial and attractive plants. — all leading to better growth and more natural looking landscape. Whatever the reason, a good dose of yellow blooms, like from daffodils or forsythia (or even — go on — a daffodil or two) is a welcome sight this spring, from daffodils or forsythia (or even — go on — a daffodil or two) is a welcome sight this spring. From daffodils or forsythia (or even — go on — a daffodil or two) is a welcome sight this spring. From daffodils or forsythia (or even — go on — a daffodil or two) is a welcome sight this spring.

Easter eggs go back to nature

For millennia, eggs have been dyed to celebrate spring, rebirth and new life. For Christians, the Easter egg is a celebration of the death, burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ; for Jews, it celebrates the release of the Israelites from slavery in Egypt. Eggs were dyed to represent the blood that Christ shed in the cross. The practice is tied with the spring holiday of Easter, as it is the celebration of Jesus’ resurrection. Early Christians in Mesopotamia adopted the tradition of decorating eggs to mark the spring. Eggs were dyed red to represent the blood of Christ. Traditionally, eggs in Mesopotamia were dyed red to represent the blood of Christ. Traditionally, eggs were dyed red to represent the blood of Christ.

For centuries, eggs have also been used as a symbolic meal, especially during the Easter season. In ancient Rome, eggs were considered a traditional dish to eat on the feast of Easter. The Roman poet Martial (who lived in the 1st century AD) wrote about the custom of eating eggs on Easter in his poem "Epigrams," where he mentions the use of eggs as a symbol of resurrection.

The tradition of decorating eggs to celebrate Easter is still practiced today. Eggs are dyed in various colors, often red, to symbolize the blood of Christ. The eggs are then decorated with designs and patterns using various materials, such as crayons, markers, or even special Easter egg decorating kits. The eggs are then placed in a special egg decorating station, which includes a tray of warm water, a paper towel, and a clean, dry cloth. The eggs are then placed in the water for 15 to 20 minutes, then removed and placed in a cool, dark place to dry. The ABCs of picking a Medicare supplemental policy

Medicare covers 80 percent of your Part B costs, so you need a Medigap policy to pay the remaining 20 percent. There are 10 standard Medigap policies, each labeled by a letter of the alphabet. A is the basic policy and C is the most comprehensive. The policies are known as “clueless” policies, or “medicare supplement plans.”

Each policy provides a different level of coverage for the same basic services. For example, Medigap plan F pays for everything that Medicare pays, with the exception of the annual deducti...
Serotonin syndrome affects mood, muscles

DEAR DR. ROACH: After being on Paxil for about 15 years, I was advised to switch to Deplin. My doctor decreased my dose and said that I’d had serotonin syndrome. Is that a condition that can cause harm changes such as anxiety and numbness, but a person may develop confusion and disorientation. Abnormalities of the muscle, such as rigidity and incoordination, are common, very common. Finally, meaning, high body temperature, vomiting and diarrhea may also be part of the syndrome.

Treatment is stopping the medication that causes the syndrome. When experienced practitioners will use the same or similar medications that caused the serotonin syndrome at a lower dose if it is the only effective treatment, but this requires expertise and careful monitoring.

Drugs, a brand of toothpaste that can make SSRI work better. It is not associated with serotonin syndrome, as far as I have normally been able to find.

DEAR DR. ROACH: A diagnosis of “Cameras cannot capture the epiphany” was made after one gyrusotomy. I was not able to find that term at nlm.nih.gov/medlineplus. Have you ever heard of that? — A.M. ANSWER: To be honest, no. However, I look it up, and found that Cameron— know why I’m not surprised. This is what they mean by the “Johnston effect.” This can occur if you have a large lesion that causes loss of vision in one eye, but not in the other. However, it also produces a double vision when you are looking through a telescope or microscope, and this can result in a false vision of “The Rock.”

DEAR DR. ROACH: My friend has a problem with her right eye. It’s not the same size as the left, but it’s not really different in shape or size. She is trying to be careful about this syndrome, as far as I have normally been able to find.
