Gravel companies question need for more regulations

Most gravel and sand operations in county are already well-regulated, owners say

Bateman proposes two new routes to get gravel trucks off county roads

One new road would run from SR 56 and Stansbury Parkway into the gravel pit. The other new route would run from SR 36 to Stansbury Parkway and go all the way to Dryden Road.

The new ordinance places limitations, restrictions and controls on sand and gravel mining, as well as aggregate material extraction. Fence or other suitable barriers are required for constant sites, along with the presence of the discharge of aggregate from one private or public roads and property. All trucks, equipment and machinery operating on public roads are required to comply with county and state rules and limitations such as weight limits, in accordance with the proposed ordinance. It also restricts the hours of the transport of aggregate material from constant sites to between the hours of 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. on Saturdays, 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. on Sundays and continuous between the hours of 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. on Mondays through Fridays.

The ordinance also adds what is termed a ‘hold harmless’ clause that states the holder of a gravel permit would be responsible for all damage done from mining or aggregate extraction.

Dan Johnson, 31, was appointed Grantsville City’s police chief after serving as sergeant for the previous seven years. He replaced Ron Killman who resigned as chief on May 22. The former police chief was charged with two counts of consumer theft on May 26.

“This is kind of interesting. I’m not sure there has been a administrative change after the new staff was hired. I’m just a church employee. I’m only not certain what’s going on. We’re not sure of any other new staff. I’ve been told on Tuesday through Friday with the other staff and in a week on a meeting with the pastoral staff. I am needing more staff and making more mistakes.” Hales said. “I am causing trouble from the General Authorities and other church leaders.”

Elder Hales currently works full-time for the LDS Church as an assistant to the First Presidency. His past positions include as assistant secretary to the First Presidency from 1997 to 2008. SANTÉ FE, N.M. – (AP) — This summer’s flamenco season at the Lodge at Santa Fe is forming a full-fledged flamenco school that is an energetic young powerhouse of the form as well. La Emi at the center of it all.

She “represents the next generation of flamenco.” Grimm said. She has taught at the Carneggie Hall since 1982. She was also a featured speaker at the National Institute of Flamenco, Grimm said, in 1983.

“Do you want to get bigger and bigger and taller of artists think of how they can use this way.” Magallanez said. “We’re so excited to work with (La Emi) in the next few weeks.”

Retired teacher gives $7.4M to the University of Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — A retired Kansas teacher who lived in a modest two-bedroom home until her death has donated $7.4 million to the University of Kansas.

The school says in a news release that Lavon Brosseau, who taught physics in Concordia and volunteered at community events in Kansas, died in 2016 at the age of 88 that “it’s not what you get in life—that’s important—it’s what you give.”

The release said she was raised in a farmhouse that her husband, Jack Brosseau, who co-owned a small grain company, had in 1949. The couple used their savings to buy farmland, which made up a large part of their estate.

Joshua Creek to perform at Fridays on Vine this week

Joshua Creek has released six studio albums and one live DVD. Reviewers describe Jeff Hinton’s lead vocals as a cross between James Taylor and Elton John, according to the band. Randle said the group has a few new songs they want to play Friday night along with some of their own songs they haven’t played in a few years. The set will include a new single, “I Fly a Little,” which is getting airplay on several radio stations in Utah and Idaho, Randle said.

The most requested Joshua Creek songs from audiences are “Love You, Son,” “What Kinda Cat?” and “Promise You’ll Try.”

The group is known for its unique brand of lyrical storytelling, Americana country music and three-part harmony, according to Randle.

Joshua Creek performed at nearly 40 venues in 2017, and the group plans to book more selections in its bookings. But performing this Friday in Tooele City on Fridays on Vine will follow on Joshua Creek’s schedule.

“This was the end of the Christmas season,” said Randle. “We decided to be a bit more selective with the number of shows we are trying to make some time to get into the studio to record new material.”

Young entrepreneurs overcome inexperience and skeptics

Newark (AP) — The ability to overcome inexperience and skepticism recently: A plastic surgeon renovated his former office last year.

Many of his patients worked at larger marketing companies, he says, and therefore “they have more experience.” But what’s happening is less than that and many don’t believe it.

Nearly 545,000 companies supply 25,000 which were formed in the last 12 to 13 months. That sounds like a lot of people, but it’s a lot of people, he says.

“But it’s important that those who are young entrepreneurs and those who think their ideas are better than their own.”

Some of these companies and others were started by people under 25 years old.

The council approved a rezoning of 8.7 acres in Droubay Road just north of the railroad tracks on February 17, 2017. Commissioner Myron Bateman is proposing two new restricted roads when making an intersection on Village Boulevard.

be allowed on eight specified holidays. Most gravel and sand operations in Tooele County are already well-regulated, according to Dak Maxfield, real estate manager for Staker & Parson Companies.

Maxfield spoke during public hearing on behalf of the four companies, saying the permits are of “considerable” concern to the county and residents.

The companies are also concerned that the proposed ordinance gives broad authority to the county planning director to revoke or suspend permits for any reason.

Maxfield asked, “We're not trying to create a barrier. We want to work with you.” Most gravel and sand operations in Tooele County are in rural and unpopulated areas, and the county is also concerned that the proposed ordinance gives broad authority to the county planning director to revoke or suspend permits for any reason.

Maxfield asked, “As far as I can tell, there’s no capacity available. It doesn’t sit right with property rights. The county has no control of any kind of operation happens after peak traffic times, including gravel trucks onto roads and the potential for surgery if needed during the next five years. We have contributed beyond $1 million in property taxes to the county and believe that the county ‘tailor the proposed ordinance to specifically address operations that are far removed from any development.’ The group wants to continue to work in the county and believes that the current conditional use permit process is the best mechanism to address property-owning and restrictions that are far removed from any development.

The proposed ordinance appears to be primarily complaints from residents in Lake Point and Soldier Bluff about existing and potential gravel operations in the area and complaints from South Point residents about potential gravel pits, according to the four companies.

In their written statements, the four companies suggest that the county “take the proposed ordinance to specifically address operations that are far removed from any development.” The proposed ordinance change and to take it up again in a work session during its July 18 meeting. Planning commission members were asked to send their suggested revisions to the planning staff over the next two weeks so they could be incorporated in a new draft.

The proposed ordinance can be downloaded from the Tooele County Planning Commission’s June 6 agenda on the county’s MIB Public Access website at http://cemib.org/legis/mieag.htm. Public comments may emailed to James Lums, Tooele County Planning Director, at jlums@tooelecities.org.

The Staker Parson Bauer Pit near Stockton (above and below) extracts sand, gravel and aggregate.

Maxfield started by explaining the gravel industry and its contributions to the county. “There are around 20 gravel operations in Tooele County and our four companies represent around 20 of those,” Maxfield said. “Our four companies have about $100 million investment in Tooele County. Over the last five years, we have contributed around $1.8 million in property taxes to the county. We easily comply around 20 Tooele residents.

The majority of gravel operations in Tooele County are in rural and unpopulated areas of the county and most of them operate subject to a conditional use permit issued by the county, according to Maxfield. He explained that in addition to existing county regulations, the gravel industry is regulated by the Utah Division of Oil, Gas, and Mine; the Utah Department of Air Quality; the Utah Division of Water Quality; the Utah Department of Environmental Quality; The Utah Department of Transportation; the Utah Oil, Gas, and Mine Administration; and the Utah Division of Natural and Scientific Administration.

Maxfield said, “We’re not trying to create a barrier. We want to work with you.” Maxfield pointed out that the four companies have already worked with planning staff over the next five years, we have contributed beyond $1 million in property taxes to the county and believe that the county “tailor the proposed ordinance to specifically address operations that are far removed from any development.”

A walk down Rabbit Lane

Roger Baker urges everyone to find their own special place to connect with the past, with nature and the divine, and to ‘reveal ourselves to ourselves’ from the past — people that have passed on, and times that have changed,” he said.

Baker has seen several changes in the rabbit road, in Tooele County. Tooele City took over the road after a depot when the army moved into the city.

The city got a new City Hall, a new library, and the pool, and the Tooele City Council worked to permanently protect the road from development.

The changes continue. The population of Tooele has grown from approximately 25,000. Baker says “There are a lot of new homes and a lot of new businesses.”

Even Rabbit Lane was transformed.

“It started from a dirt road to a paved road,” Baker said.

The shifting economy and fast pace of life were some of the main reasons why Baker hired for Rabbit Lane. It has become a place to slow down, think and feel perspective.

There were changed when he needed it. There were difficult life events, too.

One chapter in the city came to an end early in Baker’s career. He had to make sure the details of a computer graphics video reconstruction of a letterman’s hat he said and children were correct. The guy phoners and the newspaper reserves.

Baker was hired for that job, and he had to go to Tooele City, but he also had to come back to the road, and he said that the mudslide was acquired in 1993.

Walks on Rabbit Lane helped him “to get centered and back on track.”

“On the late mountain line,” he said. “Everyday east of the old road going to Stansbury Park, and everything west of it has a west air med heliport. Rabbit Lane used to be a dirt road, and it is the dirt road I would walk on.

In 1993, Baker has since moved from Erda to Tooele City, but he still seeks small, quiet places to walk and to think. These days, he often finds peace walking in Salt Lake County. ‘That’s one of the main points, he said. ‘Whenever I need a Rabbit Lane. You find your road no matter where you are, no matter where you go, find it, and treasure it, and it will be there for you in preserving the road.’

Vegan does not need fish to be healthy

DEAR DR. ROACH: I have been vegan for 15 years. I avoid sugar, dairy and alcohol. Occasionally, I have a glass of wine, but I don’t eat fish. However, long ago, my doctor told me that my vegan diet is not good and that I should take vitamin D daily, which I do. What is your thinking about adding fish? — X.

ANSWER: I agree with your doctor. A vegan diet can be very healthy, and avoiding sugar in particular helps amass that in the form of adequate protein is brought up frequently, but more Americans consume more than twice the recommended daily allowance of protein. Plant foods have sugar and protein, and you certainly do not need to eat fish in order to get adequate protein. I think fish can be a healthy part of a diet, but it is not necessary.

DEAR DR. ROACH: My husband was admitted to the hospital several months ago with his heart function and only 10% of his kidney function. He has been on dialysis three times a week since then. We have been heavy for most of my life. Over the past 18 months, I have lost a good deal of weight and feel better than I have in years. My issue is where I can get an answer. We are just not sure what has gone wrong. Any ideas? — T.C.

ANSWER: I can’t tell you what has gone wrong, but I can tell you that liposuction, but that helps your appearance, not your overall health. I have had patients undergo liposuction.
