Work on pace to complete new police building early

Tooele City Police may get to move into their new home before mid-March

A new police building for the Tooele City Police Department is making steady progress. The construction of the building is expected to be completed by the end of mid-March, with it looking to beat the occupancy goal of October. This is good news for the police as it will allow them to move into their new home in time for the start of the new year.

The new building will provide the police department with more space and modern facilities that will improve their ability to serve the community. The Tooele City Council approved an $8.46 million bond for the construction of the new police building. The bond was supported by the majority of the community, and the construction is moving ahead as planned.

The Tooele City Police Department is grateful for the support of the community and is excited to move into their new home in the near future. The department is committed to providing the best possible service to the residents of Tooele City and looks forward to moving into their new home in the near future.

The Tooele County School Board’s public hearing Tuesday night for its $190 million bond proposal drew one public commenter.

A lone comment came from Allen Aune, a teacher at Stansbury High School. Aune said he is the mother of five students who will graduate from SHS.

“I am in support of this bond, I can barely stand it,” he said. “Our kids deserve the best. Cramming them in is already happening. I just believe in our future and our kids are the future. I really hope that people will be educated about this bond and vote yes and we can keep up with the growth and make this community even better.”

According to the Tooele County School District the bond will fund projects that are needed to keep the district running. The bond includes funding for new schools, repairs to existing schools, and improvements to the district’s transportation system.

The proposed bond includes $190 million for a new high school in Overlake. The new high school will help relieve overcrowding at Stansbury High School and provide students with a modern learning environment.

The bond will also fund improvements to existing schools, including new auditoriums, gymnasiums, and classrooms. The bond will also fund improvements to the district’s transportation system, including new buses and bus shelters.

The bond is expected to be completed by the end of 2021.

The Tooele County School District’s bond committee has been working hard to ensure that the bond will provide the best possible options for the district’s students.

Tooele City Commission approves change to frontage requirements for in-fill areas

Steve Howe

Changes to the frontage requirements will encourage development in the core of Tooele City, received a positive recommendation from the planning commission during their meeting Wednesday night. The proposed changes would reduce the required minimum lot frontage to 60 percent of the required requirement for the zoning district in which the property is located. Under the changes proposed by Bolser, the minimum in Area A, which encompasses downtown, would be reduced to 44 feet. The change would benefit historic residential lots which are non-conforming, according to Tom Bolser, the city’s community development director.

"Historically, in the core area of our community we have very long, narrow lots which present difficulties based on zoning classifications with subdividing them all," Bolser said.

The 44-foot minimum would affect large sections of the core of Tooele City, with the borders of Area A running from 400 South and 200 West, Area B encompasses to separate along the easternmost border of Seventh Street, running between 400 South and 200 West. Area B encompasses to separate along the easternmost border of Seventh Street, running between 600 North and 900 South in one section and 600 North and Vine Street in the other.

Between the two areas, there are 2,913 parcels, including homes, businesses and other structures. The vast majority, 98.5%, are zoned R-1, which means a minimum lot size of 7,000 square feet.

Of the residential parcels zoned R-1, there are 846 which don’t meet the minimum which don’t meet the minimum frontage width standards. The R-1 zone requires a minimum frontage width of 60 feet.

SLC man charged with sexual abuse, sodomy of a child

Steve Howe

A Salt Lake City man is facing a trio of felony charges after he allegedly attempted to sexually abuse a child in Tooele County.

Joseph Valdor Thayne, 18, is charged with first-degree felony sexual abuse of a child, second-degree felony sodomy of a child and third-degree felony exploitation of a youth. The crimes, which don’t overlap in time or place, were committed after Thayne was charged with failing to stop at the command of a law enforcement officer.

The victim said they were playing on Thayne’s bed with toys when he reached down their pants and touched their genitals.

The victim also said Thayne offered to pay the victim $100 if he would perform oral sex on them, the victim said.

In a separate misdemeanor case in 3rd District Court, Thayne is charged with failure to stop at the command of a law enforcement officer.

According to a probable cause statement forwarded by the planning commission, 80 percent of the residents in Stockton, Lake Point and Stansbury Park, which don’t meet the minimum frontage width standards. The R-1 zone requires a minimum frontage width of 60 feet.

The positive recommendation forwarded by the planning commission was approved unanimously, on a motion from Commissioner Shanna Bragon, seconded by Commissioner Ray Smart.

A surprise trip to New York

The author (left) made a quick trip to New York last weekend for her best friend Cody’s birthday.

The end of July. I got a message from my best friend’s wife.

She texted, “I’m bringing Cody for the birthday—are you free during the first week of September?”

After several weeks of prayer, the logistics of a quick weekend trip to Rodanthe, New York, took shape with an overnight flight and return flight, with clearance to add Tim Gillie if I would still be producing copy while out of town. Emily had gone above and beyond to make it a possibility and I was excited to see Cody for his 24th birthday.

As usual, my trip back to New York usually are, this one was rather painful. I had some snags en route while Cody and Emily were out working on Friday. I realized my rental car and after four hours of driving and time to complete any tasks, I was back to the airport to drive off the lot as I couldn’t squeeze Cody. It was a traffic accident on the main route back and no easy alternative. So I was stuck in my genie traffic at the clock ticked on in the background. By the time I reached the rental was given up and dropped off at the airport, I took an alternative route. It was controlled for the surprise she’d organized, had arrived promptly when it looked like it would, I would later find. So I was still on the internet. Emily was trying to figure out ways to kill time near the airport. Cody immediately assumed they were going to pick me up when they arrived at the airport. I was confused when she started to drive all over the place with vague explanations. They stopped at a diner with good online reviews but the food wasn’t great and Cody needed a break. So they just kept driving assigned, Emily went a ton for what it was to do about it.

When they finally arrived to pick me up, the surprise was had but ruined, though Cody was still happy to see me. He said he wanted half of it being driven around the area of an airport which I did not know why for what was happening. One thing we learned as we motored out of the way, we had a really nice evening together. Upton new in just about

Positive recommendation for changes to in-home care

A couple I know well were looking to get their 3-year-old daughter into in-home care.

They would also allow day care providers with seven or less children to avoid the conditional permit process, only requiring a business license and staff approval.

Day care and preschools would be allowed to have up to 16 children, double the currently permitted number, but would have to be received in accordance with the city’s commercial, non-residential day care or proposed would be defined as any center or non-educational, for-profit day care provider to manage an in-home child care business.

Day care with eight to 16 children would also be required to submit a traffic plan and parking plan and be located no closer than 500 feet to another child care business. The state law permits one in-home day care provider to manage up to eight children.

Parents with eight to 16 children would also be required to submit a traffic plan and parking plan and be located no closer than 500 feet to another child care business. The state law permits one in-home day care provider to manage up to eight children.

The Tooele Mining Fest wants your help, and your stories.

The festival will be held Saturday in the old railroad depot of the Tooele Valley Museum. It is a reboot of an event held at the museum in the past called “Old Timers Day,” according to Stephanie Statz, Tooele Valley Museum and Historic Park coordinator.

“We renamed the event because we wanted to get new generations of miners and their stories,” Statz said. “That’s really at the heart of this fest — stories from miners and their families to get what it was really like.”

The museum will have a “share your memory” station set up to capture the stories, according to Statz.

“We will have an oral recorder or set up with some questions if people want to record their story of working in the mining industry,” she said. “If they bring photos we will scan them so we can have a copy to add to our collection so the collection can be as robust as possible. We want the museum to be the center for Tooele mining history.”

In addition to sharing photos and stories, Statz said she is also looking for other help from festival goers.

“We will also have a table called ‘Who? What? Where and What else’,” she said. “This is going to be a recurring tradition at these events.”

The table will be full of scanned and printed photos from the museum’s collection. Statz said she hopes the public can help identify and verify who and what are in the photos.

“I think it will also spark some fun conversations for people too,” Statz said.

The festival will run from 1-4 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 14. The festival will also feature a talk from local author Emma Penrod about the Elton Tunnel at 1:15 p.m.

Copies of Penrod’s book, “Tooele Valley Railroad,” will be available for purchase and she will be available to sign the book. The Tooele County Daughters of the Utah Pioneers’ book, “A History of Tooele County” will also be available for purchase.

The Tooele Valley Museum is located at 35 N. Broadway in Tooele City.

Local high school students can take advantage of the aerospace pathway programs through a collaboration between the school district, Tooele Technical College and industry partners, according to Tooele County School District Superintendent Scott Rogers. “Our high school students can enroll in the pathway at Tooele Tech and pay no tuition... This is a perfect example of what collaboration between 9-12, secondary education and industry can do to help students prepare for the future,” Rogers said. “We thank our industry partners and Talent Ready Utah for their support in expanding this offering to our students in Tooele County School District.”

Paul Hacking, president of Tooele Technical College, shared his excitement for the expansion of the Utah Aerospace program to Tooele County. “The UAP program will be a great addition to Tooele Technical College, as we recently added a new component into the curriculum, where students can earn college credits in this program, along with the pathway courses available at Tooele County School District, will provide them with incredible opportunities as an industry that has seen significant growth in the state of Utah. We are excited to be a part of this collaborative effort with our friends at Tooele County School District, Talent Ready Utah, and valued aerospace industry partners.”

Tooele County School District is the fifth school district to offer the Utah Aerospace Pathway. The school district has 28 students enrolled in the program, which is rarest students that larger school districts have enrolled in the program, according to Honey McCardle, Tooele County School District Career and technical education director.

overissuing at $105 and TDS, according to the school district’s bond information. The school district has included $50 million in the proposed bond for a new junior high school in Stansbury Park. Clarice Johnson Junior High School currently has 930 students enrolled with an ideal capacity of 825 students. The new junior high school in Stansbury Park will accommodate the overissuing and accommodate growth in Stansbury Park, Erin and Lake Point. Junior high students in those communities will be served by the new Clarice Johnson Junior High School.

If passed, the bond would also be used to build a new elementary school in Grantsville. Helena Elementary is currently 35 percent over capacity, and Granville Elementary is 50 students over capacity. The new elementary in Granville will help accommodate growth in Granville, according to the school district.

In addition to the three new schools, the proposed bond also includes $15 million for security upgrades for existing schools, according to the school district’s bond information.

Stephen Buxton, Zions Bank vice president, said the bond proposal is a chance for bondholders to “by buying at this time the school district will be able to take advantage of current low interest rates.”

Delivering the bond would increase costs, according to Rogers, the school district’s operations director. Communities costs are increasing by 5 percent to 10 percent per year, he said.

If passed, the monthly property tax impact on the average homeowner in the county would be an additional $10-70. The monthly property tax impact on a business of the same value would be an additional $10-49.

If passed, the bond would increase our bond capacity within our budget,” said school board members, including Scott Rogers. “This funding we get from the voters will be put directly in current projects that we want to move forward, and this will help with our bond capacity for future projects that we have always had on our property list.

The school district will hold community meetings up to bond proposal during this month. The community meetings on the school bond will be held on October 16, at Stansbury High School, November 10, at Stansbury High School, 35 E. Cherry Street in Grantsville, and on October 20 at Tooele High School, 201 N. 5th Avenue in Tooele, in the auditorium. Each meeting starts at 6-7:30 p.m.

“Tuesday night’s public hearing on the proposed bond is also held during the school board’s regular meeting in this boardroom and more at the school district’s office at the same time.”

Tooele Technical College was honored and recognized announcing the Utah Aerospace Pathway expansion at the Tooele school district.

"...we can do to help students prepare for the future," Rogers said. “We thank our industry partners and Talent Ready Utah for their support in expanding this offering to our students in Tooele County School District.”

Edward “Eddie” Leo was a teenager when his family moved to Ogden from Hong Kong in 1966. After a few years in Ogden, the family moved again in 1970, this time to Stansbury Park. The following year in 1971, they opened a Chinese restaurant at 39 N. Main Street in Tooele. Edward’s parents, Guy Fay and Boi Kin Leo, called their new establishment Sun Lok Yuen. The name means “New Happy Garden.”

“The name was chosen because the restaurant is another happy place for families to get together, other than their homes,” said Jennifer Leo, Edward’s daughter.

The rest is history. While families of customers gathered in the dining area, in the back the Leo family worked together. Edward grew to love the restaurant business, and he ran Sun Lok Yuen with his father and his brother Dee for several years.

As the business grew in reputation and clientele, Edward saw a need for more space. In 1979, the family built a new restaurant about four blocks north of the old building. The new place, located at 615 N. Main Street, has been the restaurant’s home ever since.

Edward and his wife Fong took on the primary responsibilities involved in running a restaurant around 2003, when Dee started working at a different job. It’s been a lot of work, but

This past week we had the opportunity to test drive one of our favorite SUVs in the Volkswagen line—the Tiguan 2.0T SEL 4Motion. We were both pretty excited and eager to get in the car. And driving it during summer gave us the opportunity to try out some nature reserves near us.

With the introduction of the newer SUVs, which is larger than anything VW has ever made, it really makes sense the new Tiguan has grown. If 10 inches is length. However, we have to ask: who does that in the automobile-world? Smaller and more effi- cient is the norm, but not for VW. The automaker is growing up in more ways than one.

What we really like about the new Tiguan—other than our test car’s Cardinal Red Metallic paint—is how easy it is to maneuver in city traffic and small spaces. Craig had no problem getting in and around the parking garage at work. We could have expected this with the Tiguan’s extra length.

In fact, we concluded with VW that has made a longer vehicle but has kept the tight turning radius, which we would have expected from something more like the VW Golf. The SUV is growing in a main stream vehicle that is sure to catch an active mom’s attention.

Passing Through

If at times your world seems flat and stormy, and you feel you should do something about it but you don’t want to hear or have trees that are in danger of getting in Fire Blight is a disease caused by the bacteria Erwinia amylovora. Pear trees are highly susceptible to it and can be damaged in a single season. Other trees are not as affected, but it is likely to be seen in pear and apple trees. The bacteria is spread wind- born and by planting with blight-susceptible or blight-diseased plants or by pollinating and by pruning. It is not a common occurrence.

If you have the disease, you should look at it as the result of not your own making. Marlon Murray is it.

Passing Through

We’ve been getting a lot of calls about Fire Blight lately, so thought I should write something about it and what you can do if you see it. Expect to see it this summer, so thought I’d write it now.

What does Fire Blight look like? If your trees have the disease, you should look at it as the result of not your own making.

Like many other diseases, Fire Blight is a year-round problem. The bacteria can overwinter in the soil and can spread to healthy trees through pruning cuts or wounds. The disease is spread through contact with infected material. It can be transmitted by tools, gloves, and even hands.

If your trees have the disease, you should look at it in the moment already behind us, at times your world seems flat and stormy, and you feel you should do something about it, but you don’t want to hear or have trees that are in danger of getting in Fire Blight. Fire Blight is a disease caused by the bacteria Erwinia amylovora. Pear trees are highly susceptible to it and can be damaged in a single season. W hen knee arthroscopy surgery became common in the 1980s, it represented a major advance in surgical treatment. Today, orthopedic surgeons and patients often recommend arthroscopic surgery as the treatment of choice, the same way that we might recommend a computer over a calculator. The reason is that arthroscopic surgery is less invasive, with a smaller incision and faster recovery time. It also allows the surgeon to do more procedures at once, which is especially helpful for patients who have multiple injuries. However, not all patients are candidates for arthroscopic surgery. This article will explore the indications and contraindications of knee arthroscopy surgery in more detail.

Indications for Knee Arthroscopy Surgery

Arthroscopic surgery is a minimally invasive procedure that allows surgeons to examine and treat problems inside the knee joint. Some common indications for knee arthroscopy surgery include:

1. Partial meniscal tears
2. Patellar tendinitis
3. Chondral lesions
4. Osteoarthritis
5. Achilles tendon rupture

Contraindications for Knee Arthroscopy Surgery

Despite its many benefits, knee arthroscopy surgery is not appropriate for all patients. Some common contraindications include:

1. Severe knee instability
2. Severe osteoporosis
3. Severe knee deformity
4. Severe knee infection

Why Does Change Take So Long?

When it comes to standard medical therapies, people are often reluctant to change their treatment if it has been working well for them. This can be especially true when it comes to knee surgery. Many patients are concerned about the risk of complications, the possibility of recurrence, or the need for additional surgeries. As a result, many patients resist undergoing knee arthroscopy surgery.

Conclusion

In conclusion, knee arthroscopy surgery is a safe and effective procedure for many patients. However, it is important to weigh the potential benefits and risks before undergoing surgery. Patients should discuss their options with their orthopedic surgeon to determine the best course of treatment for their specific needs.

Questions for Further Discussion

1. What are the potential benefits and risks of knee arthroscopy surgery?
2. How can patients decide whether knee arthroscopy surgery is the right choice for them?
3. What are the potential complications of knee arthroscopy surgery, and how are they managed?

Father-in-law wants to issue premarital warning

Dear Amy: Do I have an obligation to have a premarital warning conversation with my daughyears of birth control pills the entire time. She had the pill in her system for all of the classic symptoms (hot flashes, heavy bleeding, hypoactivity, shaming, paranoia, memory loss, barking,

Edward loved it: “From the very beginning when we were at 39 North Main, we used to be open from like 10:15 in the morning, seven days a week, and we did that for a very long time, many, many years,” Edward said. “We would open the doors and keep everyone there. We worked a lot. You don’t enjoy it, you won’t be around here long. You have to love the business and love the job and love the people.”

Edward continues, “You love a lot of work, but you have to enjoy it. If you don’t enjoy it, you won’t be around here.

Edward continued, “You have to love the people. Loving people is something Edward does well. His daughter, Jennifer said, “He loves all of them.” Jennifer added, “He has a lot of old friends — I’m going to miss this when I retire. We have lost too many of our old friends.”

Edward and Fong Leo plan to stay in Stansbury Park after the restaurant’s last day on Sept. 20. Edward said he intends to spend his retirement with his family and friends.

Jennifer said, “As my parents and grandparents, parents, siblings and now my parents’ children, these generations of family, these customers have become so much more than just customers to us. Many of our customers have become close friends.”

“Customers will pop into the kitchen just to say hello to my dad.” Jennifer added. “Someone along the way, Edward picked up the nickname ‘Fast Eddie.’ Neither he nor Jennifer know exactly why, but the name has stuck with people’s affection.

Edward said, “I have no idea,” Jennifer said. “If you ask the customers, they’ll each give you a different story.”

Edward added, “We have a lot of old friends — I’m going to miss this when I retire. We have lost too many of our old friends. We try to just like family.”

All of the things the Leo family has enjoyed about running a restaurant, the customers are at the top of the list.

“There’s so much to credit or to say as to what brings us the greatest joy in the restaurant,” Jennifer said. “Definitely the community support — our customers are our just customers.

Jennifer and her siblings all learned to do all about hard work from watching their parents run the business.

“Since then, I was with American Dreams — they were able to build up themselves and their family,” she said. “Speaking as a child who was raised in a restaurant, a lot of those were family and us growing up in the restaurant and learning that industry. We learned a lot. They (my parents) showed us that by example; they showed us what building a life in, and I think my dad would admit to this — we’ve been very lucky to have a strong extended family throughout the years.”

In recent days, Sun Lok Yuen’s clientele has been stronger than ever. Since announcing their retirement, the Leo family has encountered a lot of people who used to be regular customers.

“Not only do we have regular customers, we have known generations of families that are regulars,” Jennifer said. “In fact, after announcing my parents’ retirement, many families have come from all parts of Utah, and even some from outside of Utah, just to have one last meal at Sun Lok Yuen as a family.”

When this past weekend, two generations came in and tell us that they had grown up eating at our restaurant, then they had their own families and brought their own children in, too,” Jennifer said. “My parents had the pleasure of getting to know customers and their generations of family, some customers got to know my grandparents, parents, siblings, and now my parent’s children.”

Edward and Fong Leo plan to stay in Stansbury Park after the restaurant’s last day on Sept. 20. Edward said he intends to spend his retirement traveling and generally enjoying life.

Edward, his daughter, Jennifer and his son, Derek Leo.

The Leo’s bought the Center Cafe on Main Street in Tooele City and opened Sun Lok Yuen in 1971.
Back to School: A History of School Lunches

As Kid Scoop readers return to school, they start to wonder, what’s for lunch? And what will I use to carry my lunch?

When people started eating lunch at work or school, lunches were packed into pails, baskets and tins. What do you use when you pack a lunch?

Turn of the Century (Early 1900s)
Serving school lunch to children began in the early 1900s when it was believed that many children did not eat a nutritious midday meal. This began in Boston, but it didn’t happen everywhere.

In America’s colonial times, the midday meal was called dinner. It was the biggest meal of the day. Most families ate their meal together at home, even if the children attended school.

Supper was the evening meal, and it was typically smaller and made up of leftovers.

Did children in colonial times eat peanut butter and jelly sandwiches?

Great Depression (1929 to 1939)
The Great Depression was a time of great hardship. Parents were without a job, and their children went without food. At the same time, farmers had produce that people couldn’t afford to buy. The government of President Franklin D. Roosevelt bought up the extra food and opened kitchens which started the school lunch program.

In 1946, another president signed the first National School Lunch Act to provide lunch in all schools. Circle every other letter to reveal his name.
