Federal agency to provide assistance for COVID-19 funeral expenses

CHILEL HUTTON

As part of the Coronavirus Response and Relief Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2021, the Federal Emergency Management Agency will provide financial assistance to families for COVID-19 funeral related expenses that were incurred after Jan. 20, 2020. The program, known as the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services’ (HHS) “COVID-19 pandemic has taken many lives and brought immense tragedy to families who have lost loved ones in this novel virus,” the department wrote in its updated guidance.

“Guidance is still being finalized and will be distributed by FEMA when it’s available,” the Utah Department of Health and Human Services said. “In order to qualify for assistance, the death must have been caused by COVID-19. The death certificate must indicate that the death was attributed to COVID-19 and the applicant must be a U.S. citizen, but the individual who passed away doesn’t need to be a U.S. citizen.”

FEMA said when the program begins in April, individual applicants seeking financial assistance should keep an official death certificate, medical expense documents, and proof of funds received from other sources. Qualifying individuals can sign forms and search “federal assistance” to apply for assistance.

\"The COVID-19 pandemic has taken many lives and brought immense tragedy to families who have lost loved ones in this novel virus,\" the department wrote in its updated guidance.

TOOELE COUNTY ANNOUNCES SELECTION OF NEW COUNTY MANAGER

CHILEL HUTTON

Tooele County has selected Andy Welch as its new assistant county manager. Welch will take over the position at the beginning of May. The search, which began in June 2020, involved 26 interviews with selected candidates and a comprehensive search of over 100 candidates. The top two candidates were invited to the Tooele County Administration Building for a county-wide tour and additional interviews. As a result of these recruiting efforts, Tooele County is pleased to announce Andy Welch as the new County Manager. Welch comes to us from Hanford, Washington, where he most recently worked for 20 years as the assistant county manager of Richland County, Washington. He brings to the position a wealth of experience and knowledge in local government management and will be a great resource to Tooele County. Welch grew up in West Valley City and graduated from Kearns High School. He later attended Brigham Young University where he graduated with a bachelor’s degree in political science and a master’s degree in public administration. He also completed post graduate studies at the University of Georgia. Welch and his wife, Kryst, have five children. He loves spending time with his family and especially likes to play board games. He enjoys hiking, camping, and mountain biking, which he plans to do more of now that�

A detonation at the South Area of the Tooele Army Depot.

CHILEL HUTTON

The pandemic isn’t stopping things at the Tooele Army Depot where open detonations will be picking back up soon. The detonations will resume on April 1 and will run through Oct. 31 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., weather permitting, according to Depot officials. “This is just a way we have to destroy or demilitarize munitions that on for decades when the weather gets warmer,” said Tooele Army Depot public affairs officer Jeremy Laird. Open detonations specifically reduce the army depot’s unusable ammunition stocks, freeing up valuable ammunition storage space at an accelerated rate, and improves readiness for the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines, according to Laird. These detonations have been going on for decades when the weather gets warmer each year. Previously, the depot lot of detonations in the north area of the depot. This year, they have been housing them on the south area of the depot, because of safety, according to Laird. “We are housing them off on the part of the depot that is three miles south of Tooele,” Tooele Tech president Paul Sagers said. “The south area now has a U.S citizen, but the individual who passed away doesn’t need to be a U.S citizen.”

FEMA said when the program begins in April, individual applicants seeking financial assistance should keep an official death certificate, medical expense documents, and proof of funds received from other sources. TOOELE TECHNICAL COLLEGE RECEIVES $15.5M FROM STATE FOR CAMPUS EXPANSION

SCOTT FRIEBELICH

During Utah’s 2021 legislative session, Rep. Doug Sagers, R-Tooele, helped secure funds for the expansion of Tooele Technical College. The money, set aside in a "Direct Credits" account in the state, amounted to $15.5 million. Originally, Sagers and the budget committee put the funding into the bill for the 2020 budget, but as the novel coronavirus pandemic threw the economy into a brief spiral, the legislature decided to postpone the plan until things were financially under control.

In recent years, enrollment at the Tooele Tech ballooned. As a result of this, many would-be students are finding themselves on the outside looking in. “There’s a backlog of people that want to get into programs and they don’t have the capacity to do it,” Sagers said. “These funds will help them do that.”

Tooele Tech president Paul Sagers emphasized the importance of having physical space for students, especially for those enrolled in programs requiring in-person learning. "Physical facilities are very important for in-person learning." Sagers said. "If you don’t have the facilities, you can’t do it. These funds are being put to work now in order to meet the demand and also to make the campus a more inviting, more welcoming place for students."

Cendan Dillon heads to Oberlin

Cendan Dillon has played the drums for eight years. After high school, Cendan will continue his music education at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music.

Cendan also had private lessons in percussion. Once Cendan graduated playing drums in the band, he started offering private lessons to others, usually for the high school marching band and drums for the jazz band.

Cendan also participates in the Marching Band and Bong Corp, a renowned avenue selected marching band groups that consists of brass, percussion, and color guard.

Cendan successfully completed a virtual auditions - playing timpani snare drums, the marimba, and the telephone - for the USA’s Virtual All-State Band and played with the San Jose State University Virtual Honor Band.

Cendan grew up in a family that loves music.

“1 was a musical family,” said Toby Dillon. “Cendan started playing the drums when he was six years old. He could never put the drums down. He was just meant to be a drummer.”

“Tellurium is critical for the United States,” said Michael Moats, professor of chemistry at Rio Tinto’s Kennecott in Utah.

Tellurium is one of the least common elements on Earth, but the company later this year plans to begin recovery operations, with the capacity to produce 20 tons per year, the Desert News reported.

A couple of years ago, the hot commodity was copper, now tellurium is a major player. Its Copperton concentrator plant, one of the largest in the world, has one of the highest melting points of any mineral.

In 2019, Tellurium has been produced at the highest environmental efficiency rate, which is chiefly copper and other critical minerals.

Dangling from a Swiss cliff

Rick Steves

A good friend of my past travels has written the following about his recent trip to Switzerland:

A long-traveled place has its own special charm. The promise of a good trip has led to the belief that travel can make anyplace seem special — even ski slopes in the Alps seem more pristine after a fresh snow. But there is one place where the charm is enhanced by the very weather that makes the trip possible — the Swiss Alps. This year, I took advantage of the weather to travel in the Swiss Alps. I only travel in the Alps when there is snow, and this year there was plenty.

As I travel to Switzerland, I am reminded of the way in which the landscape can change so quickly. The way the weather can affect the mood of a place is something I experienced on my recent trip. As I climbed higher into the mountains, I could see the difference in the weather. The clouds, which had been white and puffy, started to turn grey and heavy. The wind picked up, and I could feel it biting at my face. The view from the top changed dramatically.

But as I reached the summit, I was greeted with a breathtaking view. The mountains were covered in snow, and the sun was shining brightly. The air was crisp and cold, and I could feel the wind blowing against my face. I knew that I was going to have a great time. I placed my arms around the railing, and I felt a sense of adventure wash over me.

As I began to descend, I noticed something strange about the weather. The wind was blowing harder, and the clouds were getting darker. I could feel the tension in the air. I knew that I needed to be careful. I took a deep breath and focused on my line of descent.

As I reached the bottom of the mountain, I looked back at the view. The mountains were still covered in snow, but the clouds had lifted slightly. I knew that I had had an amazing experience. I felt grateful for the opportunity to travel and enjoy the beauty of the Swiss Alps.

The next day, I continued my journey through Switzerland. I rode the lifts and hiked all over the Alps, enjoying the view and the fresh air. I was able to see the beauty of the mountains from a different perspective. It was an experience that I will never forget.

The truth is, the world is full of charm. It can change from one moment to the next, and it can make any place seem special. MATTERS OF FAITH

Rick Steves

There is too much around us that makes us fearful — the fear of others, the fear of failure, the fear of death, the fear of being abandoned. The world is full of people who seek refuge and safety, and the questions remain: “Does that really work?” “Is my refuge rock solid?” “Can I be sacrificial when you think and believe?” “What is this world?”

There are many ways and means to seek refuge and safety, but the questions remain: “How do I trust?” “Is this really work?” “Is my refuge rock solid?” “Can I be sacrificial?” “What is this world?”

There is more than one person who has sought refuge and safety, and the questions remain: “How do I trust?” “Is this really work?” “Is my refuge rock solid?” “Can I be sacrificial?” “What is this world?”

important for what we do with hands-on training,” he said. “We can’t just hire people to drive a diesel engine without a diesel engine to drive.”

One of the major concerns taking place during the pandemic will be the rearrangement of programs and classes over the summer and into the next school year. The community college leadership is hopeful that workers and customers will be able to return to the industrial maintenance department soon to get its work done.

“The only way we can really support our industry is by having more people in the classroom,” Laird said. “If we don’t have enough people to train them, we won’t have enough people to help our local businesses.”

we moved to the south area. In 2012, we organized control of the south area and we went through the permitting to do the detonations down there, because we couldn’t do it any other way. This area was originally part of the south area, and we put a bomb down it, and we put it back in the air to get control of that area.

The area is 17 miles south of Tooele and 17 miles west of Eagle Mountain.

The open detonation area is located about 100 miles southeast of the north area. From the detonation locations, the detonations are being put off in the south area with a little further into the north area. The south area residents will hear the detonations exploding. However, for the next few weeks after April 10, the area will not have detonations. The community college is aware of the disease. When we do some of the detonations, we will have to keep it quiet, and we will have to make sure that it doesn’t get out. The college is working with the department to ensure that people are aware of the disease.

The Grantsville baseball team is 3-0-1 in Region 5 play. The Buffaloes defeated the Stallions 13-2 in five innings on Monday, May 2, in Grantsville. The game was called after five innings due to the Mercy Rule after Tooele senior Attlyn Johnston had two hits in the Grantsville 7-3 win.

Tooele baseball vs. Cedar City

The Tooele baseball team fell to 2-4 on the season, dropping to 3-3 in region play. The Bulldogs lost to the Redmen 9-7 on Monday, May 2, in Cedar City. The Buffaloes will play at Spanish Fork on Thursday, May 5, at 3:30 p.m. Tooele junior Bryson Byrd each went 2-for-4 at the plate with three RBIs and two doubles as the Buffs pull away late, beat SHS.
On April 16, 1997, the U.S. banned use of the gas for more than 90 days after 2,500 children were taken to the hospital for treatment. Operation Red Comet, as it was called, was carried out in the first three days of a four-day-long general strike in response to the U.S. military’s use of the gas against Panamanian soldiers. The strike, which lasted for 10 weeks, forced the U.S. military to leave Panama in December 1989.

On April 17, 1980, the British government announced that it would begin an airlift of the last remaining Blockbuster video stores to the United States, in an attempt to prevent the appearance of what was then known as “video nasties.” The operation, codenamed Operation Red Comet, was the largest international operation in history.

The Red Comet Company was founded in 1975 to manufacture and sell fire extinguishers. The company was founded by a group of firefighters who were concerned about the safety of firefighters. The company made several different types of fire extinguishers, but its best-selling product was called a “true” fire extinguisher. This product was made from a fire-resistant material that could be easily dispensed and used in emergencies.

The Red Comet Company was acquired by a large corporation in the 1990s, and it is now one of the largest fire extinguisher manufacturers in the world. The company’s products are used by firefighters, firefighters, and firefighters in the United States and around the world.

In recent years, the company has expanded its product line to include fire extinguishers for industrial applications, as well as fire extinguishers for commercial applications. The company’s fire extinguishers are sold under the Red Comet brand name, and the company has established itself as a leader in the fire extinguisher industry.

The company’s fire extinguishers are designed to meet the needs of firefighters and firefighters, and they are tested to ensure that they meet the highest standards of safety and performance. The company is committed to providing firefighters with the tools they need to do their jobs safely and effectively.

The company’s fire extinguishers are sold through a network of distributors and retailers, and they are available in a variety of sizes and styles. The company’s fire extinguishers are also available online, and customers can order them directly from the company’s website.

The company is headquartered in Denver, Colorado, and it has manufacturing facilities in several locations around the world. The company has a strong reputation for quality and customer service, and it is committed to providing firefighters with the tools they need to do their jobs safely and effectively.

How honest do we have to be when asked for feedback?

A recent conversation taught me something about life as we walked together.

“I am always asked to offer advice,” he said, “and I find it so difficult. On the one hand, I’m happy to offer advice; on the other hand, I don’t want to hurt anyone’s feelings.”

I asked for his advice on how to handle the situation.

“I suggest that you be honest,” he said. “But don’t be too blunt. Instead, be clear and direct, but make sure your words are gentle.”

I thanked him for his advice and promised to follow it.

Evaluating performance at work can be challenging. How honest do we have to be when asked for feedback? Do we just say “no” to a request for feedback, or do we do something to help and we can often find ourselves in a bit of a conundrum.

A reader wrote to me recently about how to handle a situation at work where a colleague asked for feedback. The colleague was asking for feedback on a project they had worked on, but the person asking for the feedback had not worked on the project themselves.

The reader was confused about how to handle the situation and wanted advice on how to respond to the request for feedback.

I suggested that the reader be honest and direct, but also gentle and considerate of the colleague’s feelings. The reader agreed and thanked me for the advice.

Feedback is an important part of personal and professional growth. It helps us identify areas where we can improve and develop new skills. However, it can also be difficult to give feedback in a way that is constructive and supportive.

When giving feedback, it’s important to be clear and direct. However, it’s also important to be gentle and considerate of the person receiving the feedback. This can help ensure that the feedback is received in a way that is helpful and constructive.

It’s important to remember that feedback is a two-way street. When giving feedback, it’s important to listen to the feedback you receive as well. This can help you learn from the feedback and improve your own performance.

Overall, giving feedback can be a challenging task. However, by being clear, direct, gentle, and considerate, it can be a valuable tool for personal and professional growth.
