The County Council added more roads to the proposed truck route ordinance at their June 22 meeting. According to the ordinance, roads that were designated as truck routes in the first draft of the ordinance added to the following roads of designated truck routes: Aragonite Road; Burmester Avenue from southside Gravel SR-138 to Grantsville; Silver Mountain Road to Grantsville City; Sheep Lane from Lime Plant to Mormon Trail, from South Mountain Road to Grantsville City; Puddle Valley Road; Bodiesley Road, South Mountain Road and Stansbury Island Road.

A truck navigates on Bates Canyon Road. Bates Canyon Road will be a county truck route if the proposed draft truck route ordinance is adopted.

To celebrate the end of the pandemic in Tooele County, the health department urges individuals to continue wearing their masks if they aren’t vaccinated, as well as practicing good hand washing and mask wearing when large gatherings, and staying home if you become infected. Wildlife, air quality at risk as Great Salt Lake recedes

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The slimy blue waters of the Great Salt Lake spanned across the Utah desert, having crept over an area nearly the size of Delaware for much of its history. For years, though, the largest natural lake west of the Mississippi River has been shrinking. And a drought gripping the American West could make this the year yet.

The receding water is allowing the meeting spot of plumes that are among the dirtiest wintertime air in the country because of natural and human causes to trespass over the lakebed that's grown to 750 feet thick, said Kevin Perry, an atmospheric scientist.

“Some people don’t think of the lake where up to 20% of the bird’s population nests, with those tiny creatures to survive. Those areas are so salty for most creatures except for some tiny fish, like little brine bass, 65, it’s a good indicator with it, because of the amount of brine, the water is so salty that the organisms can’t get oxygen. If you put out a lake and it’s lower than going to a pay-charge, it’s really very satisfying,” she said.

But this year, the little red boat named Prominence that was 41 feet long, was sold for more than 20 years and was bought out of the water with a massive canoe just on the season got underway.

Record low lake levels were expected to leave the bums reach in the mud rather than the domes. Water intake has kept the other main market, channel catfish, profitable people don’t think that we’re not ready to be able of the Great Salt Lake. Britain supports a $7 billion fish industry try in Utah but in the coming years, that market could make the salt the great for even those tiny creatures to survive.

“We’re really coming to a critical moment for the Great Salt Lake,” said Kam帏, the federal government’s main market for channel catfish, profitable people didn’t think that they were not ready to be able of the Great Salt Lake.
Society will never run correctly unless we start caring for those less fortunate than us.

As individuals, we are programmed to think mainly about ourselves. From the moment we wake up in the morning we are thinking self-ishly — “I don’t want to wake up today.” “I’m cold.” “What will I do today?” “How will I make it through the day?” “What will I do after work?” “What will I do this weekend?” Statements and questions with pronouns “I” and “me” run through our brains on a continuous cycle.

According to a study by the New York Times, we spend 95% of our lives thinking about ourselves — 95%. Let that marinate for a while. Did it shock you? Okay, good, that’s what I wanted. Now, let’s talk about ourselves. From the moment we wake up in the morning we are thinking self-ishly — 95%.

As a society, most of the time we think about such things. Don’t have the luxury of thinking about others for us to simply have a heart? I’ll let you decide that. If you are a Bible believing type like me, Tan Andrew, from one of my favorite Christmas bands Third Day said, “You see, caring for the poor and worshiping God are not mutually exclusive. In fact, I would argue they are one in the same.”

Another quote says, “If you can’t feed 100 people, feed just one.” I love this, because most of us don’t have the funds to feed 100 people, but what if you feed one person and that person goes on to have a heart and feeds another. It’s not easy but it can be done. It is the least we can do.

I believe with everything in me that selfishness is a learned behavior. We learn from others around us and society, to have that “better than you” attitude. Others have, part of our selfishness is derived from the fact that we are programmed to think mainly about ourselves — 95%. Let that marinate for a while.

Most of us are fortunate individuals, we are privileged to have our heads held high, we are privileged to have a roof over our heads. We are fortunate enough to have time and money to think about what we will do this weekend, or if we have time to receive our alerts. But, what about those individuals who passed out of a drug overdose, those individuals who don’t have the luxury of thinking about such things. Those who live below the poverty line include everyone from the homeless, to the struggling single parent with children to feed, to the addict, to the individuals in jail. Arguably, all of these groups are important. Yes, even the 11% of individuals who do not have the luxury of thinking about themselves.

As a society, let’s start to take notice of these marginalized groups. Even if all you can do is smile at someone less fortunate than you. Spend 1% more of the 5% of the time you think about others during the day caring for someone. It’s not easy but it will be worth it in the end. “We don’t need to have deep faith or a chain reaction that could eventually reach 100 or more people. How cool is that? You can apply this to any type of work you provide to the less fortunate.”

I want to close by saying that you don’t have to move mountains to help those less fortunate than you. We aren’t all able to feed or help those groups alone. We all need to do our part even if it’s a small part. Let’s try to make a change in our community first.
In 1996, Terra residents evacuated as wildfire threatens homes

July 9-11, 1996
A couple of raging wildfires caused authorities to evacuate residents from their Terra homes Monday, July 8. Between 30 and 50 residents of the small community, located near Dugway Proving Ground, were evacuated as the Davis Knolls fire came dangerously close to them, said Shanon Knowlton, public information officer at the Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City.

As of Tuesday, July 9, Terra residents were still evacuated from their homes. A separate fire on the Goshute Reservation also burned out of control.

Later in the week, Terra residents were allowed to return to their homes Tuesday evening, July 9 as fire crews got a handle on two blazes which had threatened the community.

About 40 residents of the town of Terra were evacuated from their homes Monday afternoon as the Davis Knolls fire raged out of control. The fire burned 31,500 acres of rangeland and was controlled Wednesday evening, July 10.

July 6-9, 1971
After $5 million worth of site preparation, the first homes were going up at Stansbury Park, Terracor’s planned community 25 miles west of Salt Lake City.

About 15 people had either submitted plans for review or received loan approval and were ready to build, said Bruce Miller, Stansbury marketing director.

Five model homes were being built by Midwest Realty and Finance Co., an alliance of six Salt Lake County builders.

Terracor President Franklin D. Johnson said the development will someday be the verdant home of as many as 15,000 persons.

Later in the week, the Tooele Volunteer Fire Department announced that fire danger caused by weeds and dry grasses around homes, buildings and vacant lots was increasing every day. During a 10-day period the department answered seven fire calls within the city limits.

“It’s that time of year again. We’re asking everyone to please take a good look at your yards and other properties. If they need cleaning, do so,” said Bill Pitt, fire inspector.

July 9-12, 1946
Thousands of people witnessed the results of the hard working Bit N Spur Club — a top flight three-day rodeo in the beautiful new rodeo grounds and went home thoroughly satisfied with the fine entertainment.

Never was there a more impressive and nicely staged Grand Entry and never were there tougher broncs, meaner bulls and faster calves. Fine professional cowboys were hard put to keep up with first class amateurs, all of which lent a keener spirit of competition.

Later in the week, 46 days without rain coupled with excessive and numerous high winds and heat had brought Tooele Valley under the most damaging drought since 1934, which was then rated as the worst in local weather history.

May 29 was the last beneficial rain and only .07 of an inch of moisture fell in June.

The rainfall for the weather year which would end Sept. 30 was at 12 inches with 16 inches being the normal for the year.

July 8, 1921
In conjunction with the closing of the Tooele Smelter, the active medical and surgical services of the Tooele General Hospital would also close, according to an announcement by Dr. Joseph Phipps.

Only a small nursing force would be maintained to operate the maternity service. The medical and surgical cases would be transferred to Salt Lake City hospitals where Dr. Phibbs had established connections to do his own operating and care of hospital incumbents.

The Tooele Hospital was established by Dr. Phibbs and maintained by him as a private institution. With the help of the smelter he was able to keep up with expenses.

They have exposed an old bridge to the lake, allowing fish and coyotes to cross and hunt for fish and birds that feed on fish and waterfowl. The activity threatens the diurnal bird community, which is a sensitive group of birds that feed on fish and are often sought after by predators like foxes and coyotes.

For most people, Social Security benefits are an important part of their retirement income. In 2021, the full retirement age is 66 years old, meaning that your full retirement benefits are available at that age. However, if you were born before 1938, your full retirement age is 65 years old.

If you file before your full retirement age, your Social Security benefits will be reduced. Conversely, if you file after your full retirement age, your benefits will increase by 8% for each year that you delay.

The amount of your Social Security benefits is based on your earnings history. The more you earn, the more you’ll receive. However, if you earn too much, your benefits may be reduced.

To find out how your Social Security benefits are calculated, you can contact the Social Security Administration at 800-772-1213 or visit their website at ssa.gov.
MUSEUM MEMORIES

A newly married Willard Bean and Rebecca Bean arrived in Tooele Valley in 1915, and for the next five years they lived in Tooele. Willard Bean and his bride were in love and immediately knew they were in the right place. Their love story is one of the most accepted in the community.

The Beans settled into their home near the Stake Center and in the back corner of the community. Willard Bean, the middle weight champion of the United States, had a reputation as a fighter. When he decided to campaign for local elections in Tooele, he rode a bicycle to the polls. Willard decided that his campaign should be a boxing match. Fifty of the biggest and toughest boxers in town accepted the offer with pleasure. The first challenger was knocked out in 15 seconds, as were the next six boxers. In between matches, Willard entertained the surprised and diaphragm-twitching people with his jokes and other gymnastics. The Beans found their home to be ideal, as they enjoyed a virtual presentation by Lori Bean to the Museum.

The Beans were immediately popular, turning toward violence. People would even cross the street if they were found walking with the Beans. They were both invited to be members in the community. The Beans became some of the most accepted members in the community. They were both invited to be members in the community. The Beans became some of the most accepted members in the community. 2021 Nissan GT-R Premium is a pure driver's sports car

Craig & Deanne Conover

The Nissan GT-R has had a long and interesting 50-year history, as we've seen numerous updates to the world's fastest production car. From humble beginnings in 1970, the name GT-R has been associated with the world's fastest production cars. Since its inception there have been a couple of different names associated with the GT-R, one being that of Skyline GT-R, one being that of Skyline. But Nissan has kept the signature four round tail lamps as that was the original running track of G forces on the Nürburgring. It would also keep a real time screen that would display all fluid levels, etc., inspired by the video game Gran Turismo. There was an included rear seat, however more for looks and getting small items as we found when trying to put our niece in the back for a ride. Carbon fiber accents round out the cabin and added to the car's look. It was more than the car was like to drive such and iconic and legendary car.

Inside, the GT-R is very comfortable but has been updated by the author. There were fewer pages on the infotainment screen that would show all the information that was on a driving track. It was more of a casual car. The seats are heated but not for either driver or passenger. There was an included rear seat, however more for looks and getting small items as we found when trying to put our niece in the back for a ride. They were also included for safety and the control center that would provide the GT-R with “R” mode by shutting up the suspension, changing the traction control and adjusting the sound of the engine. This would say, excitement to the driver. These three adjustments are what really gives the GT-R its iconic handling abilities, making it a true driver's sports car. The name comes from the fact that the GT-R was dubbed with the nickname of “Godzilla” by the local press. Some of the features on the infotainment system could be updated with all of the new Nissan technology that has come into other vehicles in the lineup. We would love to have a navigation system, blind spot monitors and the like for the larger drives we made out on the open freeway. We had an opportunity on Sunday to go up over the Nebo Loop and experience some of the mountainous roads where the GT-R held to them like glue, again just as we would have expected on the huge 20-inch summer tires that came with it. The Nissan GT-R was a pleasure to drive and give us all the experience and excitement we would have expected from an icon in the automotive world.

Base price: $135,540
Price as driven: $123,940

Craig and Deanne Conover have been our driving partner for nearly a decade. They make a nice car such work for a weekend trip and adventure. They live in Springfield, Utah

Keeping plants thriving through smart watering

Wendy Sagens

A beautiful Sunday afternoon in May. What a perfect day to be out in the 2021 Nissan GT-R to drive through Utah's mountains and backroads on the Nebo Loop.

Some plants will sometimes transpire moisture through their leaves faster than they can take it up through the roots and soil. Plans are remarkably adaptable.

ASK AMY

An abused wife seeks to avoid divorce

Dear Amy:

My ex and our son have been living in my friend’s house for a year now. They moved in with her because my friend was being bullied by the ex’s family and was afraid for her safety. I have since moved in with my parents and I am currently in the process of splitting the house with my friend.

The ex and the son have been stealing from my friend and me. I have reported it to the police and to the court. The court ruled that they have the right to live in my friend’s house. I have requested that my friend hold an intervention with them, but she is afraid to. She says she cannot afford to pay for an intervention herself.

I understand that my ex and son have been going through a difficult time, but I am tired of being hurt and intimidated. I want to avoid divorce, but I am not sure what to do. Should I try to work things out with my ex and son, or should I just end things and move on?

Amy Dickinson

Expert Advice:

To avoid divorce, it is important to communicate with your ex and son about your concerns. Here are some tips:

1. Be clear and direct: Express your feelings and concerns in a clear and direct manner. Avoid phrases like “I think” or “I feel” as they can be interpreted as ambiguous or uncertain.

2. Listen actively: Pay attention to what your ex and son have to say. Avoid interrupting them and be open to their perspective.

3. Stay calm and composed: Keep your emotions in check and avoid getting angry or defensive. This will help you maintain a constructive dialogue.

4. Set boundaries: Clearly define the boundaries that you are not willing to cross. This will help prevent future conflicts.

5. Seek professional help: Consider seeking the assistance of a mediator or counselor who can help facilitate a productive conversation.

Dear Amy:

My son is away at college and I don’t feel like he is getting himself into any trouble. He is a good student, and I am proud of him. However, I have heard that some students are using drugs and alcohol. Should I be concerned?

Amy Dickinson

Expert Advice:

It is important to stay informed about the challenges your son may face while away at college. Here are some steps you can take:

1. Talk to your son: Have an open and honest conversation with your son about his experiences and concerns. This will help you understand his perspective.

2. Stay connected: Keep in touch with your son regularly, whether through phone calls, texts, or visits. This will help you stay informed about his experiences.

3. Seek resources: Look for resources on campus that can provide support and guidance.

4. Be supportive: Show your son that you are there for him and that you are willing to listen and provide support.

Dear Amy:

I am considering adopting a pet, but I am not sure if it is the right decision for me. I have a busy schedule and may not have enough time to devote to it. Should I consider adopting a pet?

Amy Dickinson

Expert Advice:

Adopting a pet is a big decision, but it can also bring many benefits. Here are some factors to consider:

1. Time commitment: Assess your current and future schedule to determine if you have enough time to devote to a pet.

2. Financial considerations: Consider the cost of adopting a pet, including food, veterinary care, and supplies.

3. Support system: Consider if you have family or friends who can support you in taking care of the pet.

4. Consult with a professional: Consider consulting with a veterinarian or animal behaviorist to determine if adopting a pet is right for you.

How to avoid workplace violence

Dr. Bob Skube

Expert Advice:

To avoid workplace violence, consider the following strategies:

1. Create a safe environment: Ensure that your workplace is free from physical hazards and potential conflicts.

2. Encourage open communication: Foster an environment where team members can express their thoughts and concerns without fear of retribution.

3. Implement conflict resolution: Establish a formal process for resolving disputes and conflicts.

4. Monitor and respond to signs: Be alert to signs of potential violence, such as threats or unexplained absences.

Dave Schulte

What is treatment for a fatty liver?

Fatty liver is a possibility; however, it sounds like there was no definitive diagnosis. If I were to see you, I would have you drink one glass of water with vinegar to help confirm if there is an inflamed liver and do some blood tests to help make the diagnosis. If it is fatty liver, it is diet and weight loss.

It sounds like there was some miss communication between you and your doctor. Fatty liver is a possibility; however, it over does not seem likely to me, as you have not identified any of the risk factors, and you are certainly not overweight (if you are, you are underweight). Further, although the history is suggestive of fatty liver in your family (that's just a bit high), it is difficult to fully explain. An ultrasound in a man is good, but not definitive, way of looking for fatty liver. A liver biopsy works, but it's often not done in people whose history, physical exam and ultrasound all are suggestive.

A slightly abnormal alkaline phosphatase does not necessarily mean you have a fatty liver, especially in men (women, Paget's disease of bone, high thyroid and pancreatic hormones levels can cause a high alkaline phosphatase, too. Additional liver tests—checking the ALT level or appropriate is what kind of alkaline phosphatase you have (by isoenzyme analysis)—can make the source of the elevated alkaline phosphatase clearer.

Getting an ultrasound scan and additional blood test is to a reasonable place to start. Unfortunately, lack of confidence in your physician is a different problem. If you really can't get a new doctor, then you might want to consider proceeding with evaluation in a NIH or NIH is one of the more well known places where you can go to be well taken care of. I'm sure there is good advice.

DEAR DOCTOR: A few years ago, I read that the herbal supplement remedies might help with some migraines. However, I suffered with severe migraines for over 50 years. I decided to try it, I take one capsule four times a day, and it has completely eliminated migraines. Would you please mention it in your column?

Answer: Feverfew is a herb that naturally produces anti-inflammatory compounds, and although not as effective as some other agents, the daily use of feverfew has been shown to be effective in preventing migraines. It sometimes may help when used in combination with other medications. Feverfew is easy to grow and has no significant side effects. It is a reasonable choice for people who have migraines.

Fatty liver is a possibility; however, it over does not seem likely to me, as you have not identified any of the risk factors, and you are certainly not overweight (if you are, you are underweight). Further, although the history is suggestive of fatty liver in your family (that's just a bit high), it is difficult to fully explain. An ultrasound in a man is good, but not definitive, way of looking for fatty liver. A liver biopsy works, but it's often not done in people whose history, physical exam and ultrasound all are suggestive.

What is treatment for a fatty liver?

Fatty liver is a possibility; however, it sounds like there was no definitive diagnosis. If I were to see you, I would have you drink one glass of water with vinegar to help confirm if there is an inflamed liver and do some blood tests to help make the diagnosis. If it is fatty liver, it is diet and weight loss.

It sounds like there was some miss communication between you and your doctor. A slightly abnormal alkaline phosphatase does not necessarily mean you have a fatty liver, especially in men (women, Paget’s disease of bone, high thyroid and pancreatic hormones levels can cause a high alkaline phosphatase, too. Additional liver tests—checking the ALT level or appropriate is what kind of alkaline phosphatase you have (by isoenzyme analysis)—can make the source of the elevated alkaline phosphatase clearer.

Getting an ultrasound scan and additional blood test is to a reasonable place to start. Unfortunately, lack of confidence in your physician is a different problem. If you really can’t get a new doctor, then you might want to consider proceeding with evaluation in a NIH or NIH is one of the more well known places where you can go to be well taken care of. I’m sure there is good advice.

DEAR DOCTOR: A few years ago, I read that the herbal supplement remedies might help with some migraines. However, I suffered with severe migraines for over 50 years. I decided to try it, I take one capsule four times a day, and it has completely eliminated migraines. Would you please mention it in your column?

Answer: Feverfew is a herb that naturally produces anti-inflammatory compounds, and although not as effective as some other agents, the daily use of feverfew has been shown to be effective in preventing migraines. It sometimes may help when used in combination with other medications. Feverfew is easy to grow and has no significant side effects. It is a reasonable choice for people who have migraines.
